DAIRY PRESIDENT JAILED IN BEATING OF MILK DEALER

J. C. Peek, Head of Clover Dale Company, Identified by Carl Kaplan as One of Men Involved in Abduction, Flogging.

TWO OTHERS HELD IN ABDUCTION CASE

Peek, President of Big Dairy, Denies Charges, Claims He Was at Home During Night of Attack.

J. C. Peek, 40, of 700 Yorkshire road, president of the Cloverdale Dairy, one of the leading milk establishments here, was placed under arrest and charged with kidnapping and disorderly conduct Tuesday night, following investigation by detectives into the abduction and beating of Carl Kaplan, 27, a dairyman of 354 Central avenue, Friday night.

Kaplan declared at police headquarters that he positively identified Peek as one of the men involved in the abduction, and that he was the one who treated him most brutally. Peek denied the charges. He declared he was at home throughout Friday night, could prove it, and that those responsible for the arrest would be prosecuted.

The head of the Cloverdale Dairy was taken from his offices by Detectives John Chester and W. M. Holland, of the Atlanta police department. A charge of "suspicion" was first preferred, but later changed to kidnapping and disorderly conduct. Immediately after the charges were preferred by the police, Peek gave bond for $2,000 and was released pending a preliminary hearing to be held, probably Friday.

Mableton Man Jailed.
C. M. Kelly, of Mableton, alleged by the detectives to have threatened Kaplan several days ago during the course of an alleged "milk war," was arrested a short time after Peek, and was charged with disorderly conduct. He gave bond of $100 for his appearance later.

Jewell Lawrence, negro driver of one of the trucks owned by the Cloverdale Dairy, was held on "suspicion" by the detectives. According to their reports, Lawrence told a driver employed by Kaplan that someone was going to "get" Kaplan.

According to the story told by Kaplan in his official report to the police, Peek was the man who appeared at the place operated by Kaplan and his father, K. Kaplan, at 354 Central avenue, Friday night, and represented himself to be an officer, and

Ring Is Returned to Astor After Apology for Insults

Delivery of All Reminders of Broken Troth by Eileen Gillespie's Parents Writes Finis to Mayfair Engagement Tilt.

NEW YORK, June 12.—(AP)—The controversy over the valuable diamond ring young John Jacob Astor gave to his one-time fiancée, Eileen Gillespie, was ended today with the announcement by the society girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Gillespie, that it was returned to the Astor section yesterday.

The delivery, said the Gillespie statement, took place in the office of Cartier & Company, Fifth Avenue jewelers.

"Accompanying the ring," said the statement issued by Mrs. Gillespie at her Park Avenue home, "was every other article received by Miss Gillespie from Mr. Astor except those of a perishable nature, which unfortunately could not be returned."

This announcement wrote "finis" to an engagement that created much comment in Mayfair circles—what with its sudden termination early in January, Astor's consolation trip around the world and his subsequent engagement to another society girl, Ellen Tuck French.

Astor once said the ring was worth more than $100,000 and other reports have placed its value up to $250,000.

On his return from his oriental trip in May, Astor disclosed Miss Gillespie had not returned the 32-carat engagement ring he presented her—a family heirloom, once owned by the Empress Eugenie.

The Gillespie family made no reply until today.

The statement of Miss Gillespie's parents, after telling of the delivery, added:

"The return of these articles was first offered to Mr. Astor on January 29, 1934, by letter, eight days after the cancellation of the engagement, so that Mr. Astor has had all this time in which to make up his mind whether he would comply with the demands of the parents for a written apology for his language to their daughter and a retraction of his threats concerning her and her family."

"As Mr. Astor has written this apology and has said that he will never speak of them except with respect, a return of the articles has been effected."

"Should Mr. Astor after having received these articles fail to comply with his promise, it will rest in the discretion of Miss Gillespie's parents whether they shall then feel compelled to make public the entire correspondence which took place between Miss Gillespie's parents and Mr. Astor during January, 1934, so that those who may be concerned in the matter may be able to judge fully and thoroughly the reasons why these articles have been held until this time."

"Owing to interviews attributed to Mr. Astor by the press and uncontradicted by him, which were not in accordance with the truth, it has been felt necessary to state these facts."

Mrs. Gillespie would not amplify her statement and refused to disclose the nature of the "threats" mentioned in the announcement.

RECEIVER ASKED FOR BIRMINGHAM

Five Creditors of City File Petition for Ouster of Commission.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 12.—(AP)—A receivership for the city of Birmingham, with the ouster of the city commission, today was asked in a petition filed in Jefferson circuit court on behalf of five creditors of the municipality.

The petition set forth that the five plaintiffs, Mrs. Clara E. Martin, C. M. Jackson, Effie Brown Banks, William A. Goolsby and Peter A. Law, held judgments against the city that they could not collect.

The city of Birmingham as a corporation, T. M. Jones Jr., W. O. Downs and Lewery Robinson, commissioners, were named as defendants.

Commissioners Downs and Robinson said the suit for an ouster and receivership was not based on "politics." Commissioner Jones declined to comment on the proceeding.

Charges are made in the petition that the commissioners have admitted to attorneys that the city is insolvent and has no means to pay or

NEW HOPE RAISED FOR ADJOURNMENT

Robinson Sees Possibility Session May Be Ended Saturday Night.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—A possibility, a little more than that, of adjourning congress on Saturday was held out tonight by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader, after a White House conference devoted largely to the need for labor legislation raised by the threatened strike in the steel industry.

"It is recognized that there is a general, almost universal desire that the congress adjourn," he told newspapermen upon his return to the capital, "and there is still the possibility that it may do so at the end of this week."

"Only a possibility, senator?" a reporter asked.

"You can judge for yourself," the Arkansas replied, with a gesture which was a figurative pointing to the senate's list of urgent unfinished business.

Labor Bill Crucial.

The question of labor legislation, he made it plain, is still complicating the situation, and the gathering at the executive mansion included Secretary Perkins, Senator Wagner, author of the disputed labor disputes bill; Chairman Walsh, of the senate labor committee; Donald Richberg, NRA counsel; and Representative Byrnes, the house majority leader.

"The conference discussed the subject matter of labor legislation," Robinson said, "and a final decision as to the course to be taken was deferred until more information can be gathered. A definite announcement may be expected tomorrow."

Earlier in the day, administration advisers applied blue and sheers to the Wagner bill in an effort to remodel it into a measure which will give the government effective power to deal with the threatened steel strike and still not produce an adverse effect.

MYSTERY BLAST HINTED AS CAUSE OF AIR DISASTER

Explosives Data, Chemicals Found in Plane Debris; Semet-Solvay Official Seeks Possession.

LIBERTY, N. Y., June 12.—(AP)—A three-fold investigation was under way tonight to determine the cause of the mysterious crash of an American air liner plane that killed seven persons aboard. Sullivan county authorities directed a part of their attention to a secret formula for explosives and bottles of chemicals found in the luggage of one passenger.

Preparing for the inquiry tomorrow in the office of the district attorney here, Coroner Victor G. Bourke retained a small handbag carried by a Buffalo chemist, William B. Bader, which he said contained the following:

The formula labeled: "Navy's specifications of explosive 'D,' three bottles containing chemicals, and literature and data about high explosives."

Will Study Effects.

Dr. Bourke said his inquest will scrutinize these effects.

Another phase of the investigation—that occupying the attention of department of commerce inspectors and of officials of the air line—concerned the stormy weather prevailing at the time the plane crashed into the pine-clad slope of Mongaup mountain, above Livingston Manor, a few miles from here.

Aviation experts at the scene held to the theory that Clyde Holbrook, World War aviator and pilot of the plane, was trapped by adverse winds while trying to skirt the storm area.

Coroner Bourke said P. H. Bennett, an official of the Semet-Solvay Company, of New York, by whom Bader was employed, made "strong representations" for the return of the chemist's possessions but that his request was refused pending the inquiry.

Bennett, however, said he had merely inquired as to the disposition of the contents of the bag and had not sought immediate possession of them. He expressed the fear information contained in the bag would fall into the possession of competitors.

Morale Call.

Early this morning, Dr. Bourke said, Bennett called him to say documents in the bag were valuable navy property for which his company was responsible.

The navy formula dealt with ammonium picric acid, a powerful chemical substance.

Bennett said, is not used by anyone in the United States except the navy for the manufacture of explosives.

Bottle Broken.

The coroner was interested in bits of a broken bottle, found amid the wreckage of the liner on the pine-clad side of Mongaup mountain.

Referring to the bottle, Dr. Bourke said: "There was an internal explosion, we believe, but it might have been caused by gasoline of bottle, authorities said, probably told the story of what happened to a second hand bag belonging to Bader which the Semet-Solvay official was anxious to find."

Dr. Bourke said he would have chemists at the inquiry to test the contents of the bottles found intact to determine if they were explosive.

"Unthinkable."

Bennett, however, declared the possibility of the chemicals contributed in any way to the accident was "absolutely unthinkable."

It would have been impossible, he added, for the small quantities of

DOCTORS OPPOSE SOCIALIZED PLAN IN U. S. MEDICINE

Ten Principles Listed for Guidance of Physicians in Considering Changes in Medical Practice.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 12.—(AP)—A warning of "hands off" to advocates of socialized medicine was issued by the American Medical Association tonight after a three-hour debate behind closed doors by its house of delegates.

In a statement listing ten principles for guidance of the nation's doctors in "considering all proposals for changes in the nature of medical practice," the delegates summarized:

"The consensus was that the present standard of medical practice is superior to that afforded people generally in any other country of the world."

Earlier, the delegates had voted to ask the federal radio commission to discontinue medical advertising over its radio.

They also adopted a resolution censuring the board of regents of the American College of Surgeons for "an apparent attempt to dominate and control the nature of medical practice."

Resolutions referred to committees included one protesting against free hospitalization and treatment received by "cabinet officers, congressmen, senators, their families and their servants" in government hospitals and dispensaries.

Another would authorize the appointment of a committee to investigate birth control methods and report in 1935, specifying that this should in no way be construed as an endorsement but merely so as to "compile dependable facts for future guidance."

The 10 principles evolved in the executive session for guidance of members in communities where "some experiment to change the method of delivery of medical service" is attempted listed:

"That all features of medical service be under the control of the medical profession, for no other body or individual is legally or educationally equipped to exercise such control."

"That 'no third party' must be permitted to come between patient and physician in any medical relation; that patients must have absolute freedom in choosing their doctor; that the method of giving service must retain a 'permanent, confidential relation' between patient and 'family physician.'"

"That all medical phases of all institutions involved in the medical service should be under professional control, 'it being understood that hospital service and medical service should be considered separately.'"

"That the cost of medical service must be borne by the patient able to pay at the time the service is rendered; that medical service must have no connection with any cash benefits; that any form of medical service should include all qualified physicians of the locality covered who wish to give service."

"That systems for the relief of low income classes should be limited strictly to those below the 'comfort level' standard of income, and that there should be no restrictions on treatment or prescribing not formulated and enforced by the organized medical profession."

"In all such experiments," the statement concludes, "attention must be sharply focused on the quality of medical service, rather than primarily on any other factor."

The radio resolution expressed opposition to "advertising, recommend-

Mother Given Life Sentence Will Demand Trial by Jury

Mrs. Ethel Peeples, leaving the courtroom Tuesday afternoon in the custody of Deputy Sheriff L. B. Harper after being sentenced. Staff photo by George Cornett.

Given a life sentence by Judge Virlyn B. Moore for the murder of her infant daughter at the request of her attorneys, Mrs. Ethel Peeples, 25 years old, late Tuesday announced that she had not employed the lawyers who represented her and that she would employ new counsel and demand a trial by jury.

Mrs. Peeples said the trial without a jury was agreed to by her lawyers without her consent and that she would have halted it if she had been given an opportunity.

"I think everyone is entitled to a trial by jury," the woman said. "I do not think there are 12 men in Fulton county who would give me either the death penalty or a life sentence for killing my baby under the circumstances. However, if they do I will be content. I will be satisfied with the punishment, whatever it is, if it is given me by a jury."

Slew Infant April 28.

Mrs. Peeples poisoned her infant daughter, Lannie Mae Peeples, in a downtown hotel here on April 28. Len B. Guillebeau, an attorney, said he had been approached by women interested in Mrs. Peeples. He said he had not been retained to represent her but if he is retained he will file a motion to have the verdict set aside and ask for a trial by jury.

Judge Moore said it was the first time a life sentence or a life sentence

JEWELRY ROBBERY BELIEVED SOLVED

Six Watches Stolen From Bennett Store Located; Olin Smith Implicated.

Solution of the $10,000 jewelry robbery at the store of Claude S. Bennett, 207 Peachtree street, on the night of April 27 appeared certain Tuesday when detectives assigned to the case began recovery of the loot. Indictment of Olin Smith, 32, of Atlanta's "green sedan" bandits will be sought before the Fulton county grand jury as the instigator of the robbery, one of the most daring in the records of the Atlanta detective bureau.

Smith, already under sentence of from four to nine years, but now a prisoner in Fulton tower, was declared by detectives to have revealed information which resulted in the recovery of six watches stolen from the window of the jewelry store when the plate glass was smashed with a brick. As a result of Smith's information, one watch was recovered at Hapeville, four in Philadelphia, Pa., and one in Roslyn, Va.

Thus far detectives have not indicated whether Smith's partners in the green sedan, M. L. Craddock and Theo. Berry, are implicated in the Bennett store robbery.

Despite the fact that the jewelry store is directly across the street from the Henry Grady hotel, in a brightly lighted section, the establishment was

Jute Tax Is Removed From Produce Bags

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—Senator Pope, democrat, Idaho, was notified by the agricultural adjustment administration today that the compensatory jute tax on burlap bags used for wheat, potatoes, onions and other farm produce, had been removed. The Pacific northwest senators and representatives have been fighting for months to remove the levy on burlap bags used for farm produce, which increased the price to the farmers about 2.25 cents each. In the Pacific northwest alone, where about 25,000,000 new bags are used annually, the tax was estimated to total approximately $500,000.

Governor Eugene Talmadge, who has been opposed to the removal of the jute levy, Tuesday night deplored the action.

"It will mean simply this—more jute will be used, and less cotton. It is a great pity. They cut the southern farmer's cotton acreage and now remove the tax on jute, throwing open the door for importing a substitute for what cotton he has left," he said.

TIN AND RUBBER NEEDED BY U. S.

English Rebutted for Failure To Make Definite Offer as U. S. Modifies 'Cash or Nothing' Stand.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(UP)—The British government tonight was bluntly told by the United States to stop beating about the bush on the war debt question and to come out into the open with some positive suggestion for a compromise settlement.

Secretary of State Hull suggested Britain advance a proposal to pay all or part of her $4,000,000,000 debt in goods or services, inasmuch as she claims she lacks the cash. He said the United States would be glad to entertain any such proposal.

The invitation was forwarded to the British ambassador here, Sir Ronald Lindsay, in a note from Hull remarkable for its plain language and terseness.

The suggestion that the American government is open to proposals by the debtors to make payments in goods or services, coming with President Roosevelt's signature on the new tariff act, was held especially significant. It marked the first official suggestion by this government that it would consider payments in kind.

The president's signature of the new tariff act, which was regarded as an especially important overture.

Rubber and Tin.

There are many important commodities which the United States must import almost exclusively from foreign countries. Britain, for instance, might profitably offer payment in rubber and tin. The United States imports annually about $87,000,000 worth of tin and vast amounts of rubber. British possessions are leading sources of both.

The United States also buys British manganese from India and chrome from Rhodesia. Belgium has important rubber deposits in Africa. France has supplies of chrome and other products that the United States needs. Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring said that through debt bargaining the United States might build up reserves of essential metals needed for the future.

Representative Millard C. Caldwell, democrat, Florida, already has introduced a resolution authorizing the

Salvador Death Toll May Mount to 2,000

SAN SALVADOR, Salvador, June 12.—(AP)—The magnitude of the worst disaster in its history was becoming realized in this Central American capital little by little tonight as reports of death and destruction in last Thursday's hurricane filtered through shattered communications.

It was estimated here the death toll would be not less than 2,000, the figure set after an original survey, hastily made. Officials indicated it might go higher.

Almost constantly reports were arriving describing the discovery of the remains of entire families, buried under falling earth or drowned.

Selection of Southeasterner To I. C. C. Membership Sought

Commission Has No True Representative From This Section, Representative Ramspeck Points Out.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Strong representation will be made to President Roosevelt this week by the Georgia house delegation for appointment of a southeasterner member of the interstate commerce commission when the term of Commissioner Patrick J. Farrell, democrat, of Vermont, expires next December, Representative Ramspeck, of Atlanta, said here today.

Authorized by his colleagues to draft a letter to the executive outlining the views of Georgia on the matter of direct representation, Mr. Ramspeck has been assembling detailed data on the present personnel of the commission, together with the geographical sections of the country which the present membership represents.

It has been found that Commissioners Walter W. Spahn, democrat, of Texas, and Hugh M. Tate, republican, of Tennessee, are the only two members from south of the Mason and Dixon line and neither one is a true representative of the southeastern territory. The chairman, William E. Lee, is a republican from Idaho, Belthasar H. Meyer, republican, of Wisconsin; Clyde B. Aitchison, republican, of Oregon; Joseph B. Eastman, independent, of Massachusetts; Frank McNamany, democrat, of Washington, D. C.; Claude R. Porter, democrat, of Iowa; Charles D. Mahaffie, democrat, of Washington, D. C.; and Carroll Miller, democrat, of Pennsylvania, complete the membership of the commission.

Members are appointed for terms of six years.

Commissioner Spahn, who was appointed in February of this year, has been having serious trouble with his eyes, and it is thought by some that he will not be physically able to finish out his term.

Recent protests from Georgia and other southeastern states against freight rate discrimination in favor of marble and granite quarries of Vermont, so impressed the commission that the way has been opened for a rehearing in important stone rate cases, but Georgia's representatives in the house feel that in order to insure fair treatment by the commission in the future the southeast should have its own representative.

Mr. Ramspeck has not yet drafted his letter to the president in its final form, but he hopes to have a detailed memorandum in the hands of the chief executive not later than Friday of this week.

"Of course, we are greatly pleased at the ready response the commission made to our protests against rate discrimination in the southeast," he said, "but with a vacancy occurring on the commission this coming winter, my colleagues and I feel that this is the time for Georgia and other southeastern states to press their claim for representation. I feel confident that President Roosevelt will give his personal attention to our appeal."

FULMER SEEKS FUNDS FOR COTTON FARMERS

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—Representative Fulmer, democrat, South Carolina, told the house today that heavy rains and hail storms were destroying cotton in southern states and that he had taken steps for Red Cross relief and extension of the crop production loans.

"For the past three weeks," Fulmer said, "we have had continued and excessive rains and in several sections of the south hail storms. Crops have been washed away and destroyed in many instances. Grass and boll weevils are raging."

"I have secured the services of a representative of the national Red Cross to make a survey of these conditions. I received a telephone report from the Red Cross this morning bearing out my statement as to conditions. The Red Cross and the relief agencies of these states will take care of emergency cases."

"Thousands of farmers, if they are to make a crop and pay to the government money already borrowed through the seed loan office and the Production Credit Corporation must have at once additional funds to buy nitrate of soda in order to successfully produce their crops."

"I have already asked for a conference with the secretary of agriculture hoping to secure additional loans for farmers whose cotton is now pledged to the government under the 10-cent per pound program. The parity price for cotton today is about 15 cents. Commodity Credit Corporation will make these loans if instructed to do so by the secretary of agriculture."

FINANCIAL CRISIS LOOMS IN EUROPE

Threat of Collapse of German Mark Is Closely Watched.

LONDON, June 12.—(UP)—An alarmed Europe hovered tonight beneath the shadow of a new financial crisis—brought about by the threat of a collapse in the German mark.

Other countries hurried to ward off the impending blow, which, it was expected, would rock the European financial structure. Nations still on the gold standard rallied their best financial brains to keep their currencies on that basis.

The stabilization funds maintained by the United States and Great Britain on the leading world markets to protect their currencies from the shocks of undue fluctuations in other money were geared up to keep the pound and the dollar on an even keel if the storm broke.

American industrial and financial groups with big interests in the European business world, fearing that the value of the mark will be officially sliced, prepared to withdraw their capital. A new flow of gold toward New York seemed certain.

Europe's leading houses were tense. Traders, already jittery because exchange restrictions on the Italian lire and doubts about the Swiss franc, stayed nervously on the sidelines to watch the German situation.

Meanwhile in Berlin, directors of the Reichsbank were summoned to meet Thursday to discuss the question of the transfer of German marks to meet the reich's obligations abroad. It was expected to be the first step toward rounding up the serious foreign exchange situation before next week's cabinet meeting.

SENATE BODY FAVORS LEAF PRODUCTION BILL

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—The senate agriculture committee today approved without change the house bill to control tobacco production through taxation.

The bill is along the lines of the Bankhead compulsory cotton control measure passed earlier in the session.

Chairman Smith, democrat, South Carolina, said he would press for final action before adjournment.

The bill would authorize the secretary of agriculture to impose a tax of 23.1-3 per cent of the selling price on growers who refused to abide by quotas assigned by the farm administration.

He would have the discretion, however, to make this only 25 per cent.

Tax-exemption warrants would be issued to growers to enter into the AAA agreements and in certain counties where the production agreements did not provide an equitable distribution the secretary could increase the quotas by 5 per cent.

The tax would be applicable to all tobacco harvested in the crop year 1934-35 except Maryland tobacco, Virginia sun-cured and cigar leaf tobacco.

A house resolution directing the federal trade commission to investigate conditions surrounding the sale and distribution of milk and other dairy products was approved by the committee.

Youth Placed on Probation In Duke Extortion Attempt

NEWARK, N. J., June 12.—(AP)—Thomas Layden, 17, named today in indictments charging him with attempting to extort from Doris Duke, tobacco heiress, and Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, $5,000 each, was given a suspended sentence by federal Judge Fike and placed on probation for three years.

Layden pleaded guilty to both charges.

He will be sent to the National Training school at Washington, D. C., and will report monthly to Edgar W. Dobbins, federal probation officer, Judge Fike ordered.

The jurist also named Michael Chalmers, 17, and Joseph J. Gaudet, 17, as co-defendants in the Duke extortion attempt.

The attempt to extort money from Miss Duke under threats of bombing her Somerville estate was revealed for the first time today in the federal grand jury indictment.

Layden was arrested in connection with the extortion attempt aimed at Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey.

PRESIDENT SIGNS BILL REGULATING AIR MAIL

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today signed into law the administration's bill for regulating air mail transportation.

The president's signature climaxed months of investigation and controversy over the handling of air mail under this and former administrations.

Among other things, the bill eliminates some of the practices denounced by Postmaster General Farley when he cancelled mail contracts of all private air lines in the United States last January.

It authorizes the postmaster general to award one-year contracts by competitive bidding.

A company is prohibited from bidding if an officer or "employee" performing general managerial duties has entered into any combination to prevent bidding and also if it pays any annual compensation exceeding $17,500.

No concern may have more than three air mail contracts, but plans are under way to waive this for one year.

Postal officials said this would affect American Airlines, Inc., which has eight of the temporary contracts let by the postoffice department after the mail was carried for a time in army planes.

The signing was in the presence of postoffice officials and congressional leaders.

Those present included Harlow Branch, assistant postmaster general; Karl Crowley, postoffice department solicitor; Chairman McKellar and Mead of the senate and house postoffice committees and Senator Black (D-Ala.) who conducted the investigation resulting in the cancellation of the old contracts.

The one-year contracts authorized by the new bill must contain rates not exceeding 33.1-3 cents per air-mile for a load of 300 pounds and not above 40 cents for larger loads. They may be extended indefinitely under terms fixed by the interstate commerce commission as "reasonable" compensation.

The signing was in the presence of postoffice officials and congressional leaders.

Suspect Confesses Fatal Stabbing of 5

SUSANVILLE, Cal., June 12.—(AP)—Quoting the prisoner as declaring he does not care what the authorities do to him and that his actions resulted from the breaking up of his home, Sheriff James Leavitt said tonight that Peter Aloisi, 45, today confessed stabbing five people to death.

The sheriff said Aloisi told him and other officers that he had not intended to slay five persons, but only Joe Fazio, whom he characterized as his bitter enemy and the person responsible for the estrangement between himself and his wife and children.

Fazio, a grocer, his wife, their grown son and daughter and a woman neighbor were found killed and mutilated Sunday night.

Sunstroke was believed to have caused the death late Tuesday of Roy L. Martin, 40, a prominent farmer, residing near Ellenwood.

He was found dead seated on his plow in a large field, a short distance from the home of his father, C. C. Martin, long a resident of the Ellenwood locality.

Neighbors reported they had watched the man at work, plowing with a team of horses and that he apparently sat on the plow to rest. When an investigation was made he was found to be dead.

Beside his father Mr. Martin is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Lena Jarrett and Mrs. L. H. Cook.

Funeral services will be in charge of Howard L. Carnahan. They will be conducted at 11 o'clock Thursday morning at Bethel Methodist church, with Rev. W. N. Smith and Rev. G. P. Cantrell officiating. Burial will be in the churchyard.

I. C. C. Orders Inquiry Into Pullman Charges

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—A general investigation of railroad passenger fares and Pullman and chair-car surcharges was ordered today by the Interstate Commerce commission.

The commission said passenger fare levels maintained by railroads in various sections varied to such a degree that the question had arisen as to the lawfulness of some or all of them.

The question also has arisen as to the legality of surcharges on sleeping and parlor cars, it added.

REGIONAL LABOR BOARD TO HEAR 2 COMPLAINTS

The Atlanta regional labor board will convene at 10 o'clock this morning in Room 324 of the old postoffice building, to hear the first of two complaints of employees against their firms, in which alleged violation of the rights of collective bargaining and classification of skilled and unskilled labor is charged.

The first complaint to be heard will be that of the employees of the J. S. McCauley Company, of Atlanta. Hearing on the second complaint, that of employees of the Tennessee Stove Works, of Chattanooga, will be heard by the board at 11 o'clock Thursday morning in the same room. Robert B. Troutman will preside as chairman of the labor board.

SHANGHAI, June 13.—(Wednesday)—(UP)—Disappearance of a Japanese vice consul at Nanking rapidly developed today into a serious international incident.

Increasing tension caused fears of reprisals which might result in renewal of unofficial warfare in the Shanghai-Nanking area.

Japan demanded that China guarantee the safety of the missing diplomatic official, Hideaki Kuramoto. He disappeared in Nanking last Friday after bidding a party farewell at the railroad station in Hsiakwan, waterfront suburb of Nanking, outside the capital's historic walls.

The Chinese recalled the foreign bombardment of Nanking in April, 1927, when the southern armies menaced foreign lives and property, killing several before the ships fled. The capital remains the center of nationalist propaganda where the natives have been schooled for years now in anti-foreign doctrines.

The Tokyo note advising Nanking that Japan holds China responsible for Kuramoto's well being was handed the foreign office at Nanking by Consul General Suma. The Japanese legation in Shanghai revealed the contents of the note which Foreign Minister Koki Hirota cabled from Tokyo.

Persons close to the Japanese indicated they were prepared to enforce their demands, the matter of "face" or prestige, being involved, as well as the lives of Japanese nationals in such interior towns as Nanking.

Frog Leaps From Incision in Hand As Sore Is Opened at Cuban Hospital

HAVANA, June 12.—(AP)—This is the story of a frog.

In fact, it ought to end frog stories. The frog who spent some 40 years entombed in a stone wall was really "small fry" compared to the yellow frog of Cienfuegos.

And thereby hangs this tale—which, literally translated from a Havana newspaper is as follows:

"A case which left astounded the surgeons and others in whose presence it took place, occurred yesterday in the municipal hospital of Cienfuegos when upon opening an abscess in the right hand of the Spanish farmer, Manuel Acosta Santalla, of the town of Abreus, hardly had the first incision been made when from the incision leaped a frog. The frog, which was living within the inflammation, which had given atrocious pain to the unfortunate farmer who on realizing what occurred, could not control his nerves and fainted."

"The case was observed by various persons and many others have gone to the hospital to convince themselves. The doctors explained the case by saying that possibly Acosta Santalla, who had an injury in the same place as the abscess, had washed it when the injury occurred, in some creek or puddle containing frog eggs, one of the eggs remaining within the wound and hatching under the heat of the inflammation and producing the pain suffered by the patient. One thing which makes the case stand out is the fact that before the operation the hand was free of bandages, making impossible any hypothesis that the batrachian might have been hiding in a fold of a bandage."

No mention was made of the physical condition of the frog. Its present whereabouts also remains a mystery.

CCC Camps Not Penal Institutions, Moseley Says in Letter to Jurist

Civilian conservation camps throughout the nation are not to be considered corrective institutions for young men with criminal tendencies. Major General George Van Horn Moseley, commanding the fourth corps area, so stated in a letter sent Tuesday to Judge Jesse M. Wood, of the criminal court of Atlanta.

Judge Wood's reply is to the effect that he has sentenced no one to a CCC camp and does not look upon the training as correctional.

The general and the jurist disagreed when it was reported that Judge Wood, a few days ago, indicated that if a prisoner, M. P. Melton, 18, could be admitted to a camp he would be allowed to do so rather than go to a chain gang.

"The young man's lawyer said he had a chance to enter one of the camps," Judge Wood said Tuesday. "I believed if he did it would be the best thing for him, and therefore, allowed him to go."

General Moseley's letter said in part: "May I point out to you that the civilian conservation corps is a very different thing from those institutions which carry out the sentences imposed by your court. In no sense is it a corrective institution for young men who have exhibited criminal tendencies. On the contrary, it is made up of those lads whom the depression left unemployed on the streets of the nation. . . . Those selected are of good character and where local communities have attempted to do what you have done and pass on to us a lad of bad character, he is discharged as soon as discovered."

Meanwhile, Melton remains in jail, awaiting settlement of his immediate future.

Johnson Terms Darrow Claim Of Code Altering Ridiculous

Complaint Group's Second Report Claims Agreements Reached in Open Are Changed in Secret.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—The Darrow review board likened NRA methods to a military encampment today and Hugh S. Johnson retorted that the description was "ridiculous."

The second report of the board renewed assertions that NRA codes fostered monopoly and said some "unrevealed and mysterious agency" changed trade practice parts some where between their approval by the trade and promulgation by the White House.

Military Terms.

The report did not mention Johnson by name, but it was flavored with military terms.

"We desire to enter our protest against the practice of surreptitious altering codes drawn in the open. It is most unfair, unreasonable, arbitrary and autocratic."

"It clothes the administration with the perilous power of an economic strap. It cannot exist without tending to multiply the ascendancy of the large enterprises; it cannot exist without much graver dangers to our economic system."

There is, moreover, connected inseparably with it a most unpleasant suggestion that favors more of the methods of a military encampment than of legitimate and orderly business."

Specific Code.

This statement was made in connection with views of the boot and shoe code, which with the lumber code was subjected to the most vigorous treatment of 13 codes considered in the second finding of the review board.

Of the lumber trade association pact, the board said: "The audacity of some of the performances under this code are of a nature to cause the initiated to gasp and stare."

Darrow decided that the lumber code worked out to this point: "The consumers of lumber are to pay for the future growing of trees but the trees they pay for are to remain the personal property of the owner of the land upon which they are to be grown."

Monopoly charged. The board said monopoly existed under that code.

Some of the sharpest words were in reviewing its study of the retail trade industry.

"The sinister changes made in this code, without warrant, without submission to the body that made the code, without notice to the enterprises injuriously affected, constitute an arbitrary exercise of power that seems to demand searching inquiry on even graver grounds than those of economic justice," the report said.

The report said there was a change in the trade compact on advertising which "of course thumps all the life and vitality out of the original intention and leaves it limp and meaningless."

"As to the authorship of the change that overthrew the hopes of hundreds of thousands of conscientious businessmen, we are left in no doubt," the report said. "On November 4, the administrator of the national recovery act said this:

"I myself wrote the word 'inaccurately' into the retail code before the president had signed it. I did it on my own responsibility."

Of other changes in the retail code, it said: "It is a matter of public concern to know how and by whom codes thus prepared for public protection and the welfare of industry are in this stealthy manner ruined. As to one, at least, of these changes the record leaves to us no doubt; the others are matter for surmise."

Clung to Faith.

The report said that "for a considerable period after the code had been promulgated in its mutilated shape, thousands of small dealers, unaware of the alterations, clung faithfully to their original faith only at last to be cruelly deceived."

Harking back to Johnson, the report declared: "The rule of the military commander is totally unsuited to the genius, habits, traditions or psychology of the American people and wholly ineffectual in meeting the present national crises."

Cement Discussed.

Turning to a discussion of an institute in the cement industry, the report said: "The function of this device has had inadequate attention. It appears to operate in each industry as a king of steering committee or directorate whereby the greater units can manage, dominate and have their will over the weaker."

The report discussed public ownership of natural resources in connection with the petroleum code, administered by the secretary of interior instead of NRA, and recommended enactment of the Thomas bill to make permanent the provisions of the temporary oil code.

Assumed Privileges.

The report spoke of the "assumed privileges" of oil producers and added: "Since they did not put petroleum into the earth and it is not theirs but belongs to all of us, and since it has become a virtual universal necessity, there is as much reason to recognize their right to control it as there would be to allow them to control the supply of air or sunshine."

The board said monopoly existed under that code.

Dionne Quintuplets Continue Weight Gain

CORRELL, Ont., June 12.—(AP)—A steady gain in weight over a period of eight days is an indication that the Dionne quintuplets are making progress, despite the fact that some of them show losses at some of the daily weighings, Dr. A. R. Dafeo, their physician, reported today.

Their weights today compared with those of June 4, when they were a week old, show they have gained almost two ounces each—9.38 ounces between them. They weighed 10 pounds 11.4 ounces in all then and scaled 10 pounds 10.5 ounces now.

man of the Silk Association of America. It said: "The implication in the Darrow report that you changed other advertising provisions of the retail code without the consent of the retail association proposing the code is not founded upon facts as I know them."

"If the good Lord Himself had been administrator of the NRA during its first year the hundreds of second-guessing Americans who love to criticize anything and everything adversely would have had no difficulty in my opinion in pointing out mistakes which have been made."

DARROW BOARD CRITICISMS SCORED BY LUMBER GROUP

CHICAGO, June 12.—(AP)—Criticism by the Darrow recovery review board of the provisions and administration of the lumber code was denounced as "unwarranted" today by officers of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association.

They asserted at sessions of the association's annual meeting that the men singled out for attack by the Darrow board were efficient and valuable in the code match in their opinion in pointing out mistakes which have been made."

NRA REPRESENTATIVE EXPLAINS NEW POLICY

Clarifying interpretation of the national recovery administration's recent abandonment of price-fixing measures, William L. Mitchell, Georgia NRA compliance officer, pointed out today that the new policy is applicable only to pending and future codes and does not apply to existing approved codes.

"I want to emphasize," he asserted, "that pending codes will remain in effect, just as originally adopted, unless amended after the customary procedure, including public hearings."

The administration's new policy, he continued, bans price fixing even of minimum prices, except in emergencies which make such action necessary to halt destructive price cutting, protect small enterprises, curb monopolistic tendencies or maintain code wages and working conditions.

Spanish Government Defied by Catalonia

BARCELONA, Spain, June 12.—(UP)—Open defiance of the central government of the Spanish republic was voted again today when the local Catalan parliament approved for a second time the so-called law of cultivated properties. The vote was unanimous, 88 to 0.

The action was equivalent to defiance of the tribunal of constitutional guarantees, the highest legal authority in Spain, which has declared the law unconstitutional. The law covers contracts between the local Catalan regime and individuals who desire to cultivate lands.

CATALANIAN REBELLION FEARED NEAR AT HAND

CERBERE, Franco-Spanish Border, June 12.—(UP)—A Catalan rebellion with thousands of men under arms in the north was feared tonight.

Leaders were reported prepared to launch a coup d'etat by force and set up at last the long-awaited Catalan republic in northeastern Spain. Proclamation of the new state within 24 hours was forecast.

'DOPE' VALUED AT $480 SEIZED, MAN ARRESTED

Narcotics valued at $480 at bootleg prices were confiscated, and a man who gave his name as Freeman Johnson, of a Crumley street address, was placed under arrest late Tuesday afternoon by federal narcotics agents and city detectives.

According to the officers, Johnson is alleged to have rented a room in the 300 block of Pylman street, which he seldom occupied. When a package came in the mail for him at that address, suspicious was aroused, which resulted in the seizure of the parcel, which was found to contain 480 grains of heroin. The arrest was made by Detective W. D. McGee and Federal Agents J. W. Crozier and P. A. Williams.

FUND OF $212,000 IN SCHOOL BUDGET

Controversial Sum Put in Sheet Which Will Go to Mayor Key.

Mayor James L. Key will be asked to approve a school budget including the controversial $212,000 school allocation, which he vetoed, according to action of the board of education Tuesday.

The board, on recommendation of Frank Fling, chairman of the current expenditures committee, sanctioned a revision to the budget setting up the $212,000 fund for salary accounts.

If Key refuses, and it is conceded that he will refuse, the board will continue to operate under the old budget. J. Ira Harrelson, president, made that statement when asked directly what the board proposed to do if Key refused to sign the amended budget.

An additional anticipated $22,245 revenue to the schools, which was available because of increased anticipations by the city government was diverted for the most part to salary reinstatements. The fund is the school district's 30 per cent of city revenue as provided by the city charter.

The buildings and grounds committee of the board, headed by Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, succeeded in having passed a resolution to obtain the $4,000 which the city received for sale of a lot on Orme street diverted to the board. A total of $1,700 of the fund will be expended to aid in buying additional Commercial High school property, if council agrees.

Mrs. Peterson claimed that the lot was given to the school by David Mayer and that the deed provided that in the event it were not used for school purposes it should be sold and proceeds utilized by schools.

Mrs. Peterson, who also is chairman of the federal building program committee, told the board that if the federal authorities fail to provide $40,000 needed for materials to complete several jobs begun by federal authorities, the board must appeal to council for that amount.

Assistant Solicitor-General John Hudson gave school textbooks a clean bill of health in so far as inclusion of socialistic and communistic materials are concerned, William A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, announced.

H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of schools, ordered to move inside the city when re-elected several weeks ago, requested his friends to drop a move to allow him to remain at Stone Mountain. They acceded.

WOODROW WILSON COLLEGE OF LAW AWARDS DIPLOMAS

Fourteen members of the senior class of the Woodrow Wilson College of Law received their diplomas Tuesday night at graduation exercises held at the Druid Hills Baptist church.

The class included several who have already passed the Georgia bar examination. Among them were Max M. Cuba, second ward councilman; William J. Anderson, a city detective; George Dewey, Elchison, accountant; Byron S. Smith, court reporter, and Richard Paul Morgan, attorney. N. E. Nicolaides, president of the class, is the son of the mayor of a village at Carpathos, an island in the Mediterranean sea.

Other members of the class were J. A. Fuller, J. M. Ingram, A. G. Johnston, C. McDonald, E. C. McLaughlin, R. S. Neeson, F. E. Varner and C. L. Cowart.

Finding of New Blood Substances Reported to Medical Profession

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE.
CLEVELAND, June 12.—(AP)—Discovery of new substances in the blood, which play the role of balancers, and which may be new personality chemicals, was reported to the American medical profession today.

Some of the physicians who heard the report said it promises to open an entirely new field of medicine. These chemical balancers appear to act as stoppers against the effects of the hormones which the body produces from its endocrine glands.

The endocrine hormones in turn regulate growth, energy, color of complexion, sexual development, bodily contours and numerous characteristics often associated with personality as well as health.

The new developments were reported to the Association for the Study of Internal Secretions meeting simultaneously with the American Medical Association. Their significance was explained by J. B. Collip, M. D., of Montreal. A number of medical scientists collaborated in the discoveries.

The medical name for these balancers is "antagonistic substances." Their chemical nature is not yet known, except that they differ from the "antibodies" which the body manufactures to protect itself against disease.

One of these "antagonists" has been definitely found in animals, another shows traces, and there is evidence that the same chemicals exist in human blood.

Under Dr. Collip's theory there is an antagonist substance for each hormone. The two maintain a balance. This would radically affect the medical treatments now given by doses of hormones, to regulate growth, sex life and many other troubles. For in the past hormone upsets have been blamed upon either too much or too little of the hormone produced by the patient's own body.

Under the new discoveries it appears that in the balance between the hormone and its antagonist the proportions of the two may differ in individuals.

In other words in some cases it may have been the hitherto unknown antagonist which was at fault, instead of the hormone secretion.

This, Dr. Collip pointed out, would explain abnormal responses of some individuals, apparently normal, when hormones were administered to them.

The antagonist substance most clearly identified balances a secretion of the thyroid gland. It has been obtained from the serum of animals. It has proven capable of stopping or inhibiting the action of a hormone dose 200 times larger than the minimum normal dose.

This particular antagonist, when produced from the serum of a horse, could be preserved either in a refrigerator or at room temperature for about two months. This period is rather brief for medical use.

Text of Note on War Debts Sent to Britain by Hull

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—The text of the war debts note by Secretary Hull to the British ambassador follows:

The observations contained in your note of June 4, 1934, concerning the indebtedness of the United States to the United Kingdom have been studied with close attention.

This government is sensible of the elements of the situation set forth by your note, and the difficulties that the heavy war expenditures undertaken in its own behalf and in behalf of its allies, the burden of taxation that has been borne by the British people, and the transfer of resources that the certain circumstances may arise in the foreign exchanges.

With certain observations, however, and the inferences drawn therefrom, I regret that the American government is unable to concur in and in three instances it feels that, for the purpose of record, it should make its own attitude clear.

First, his majesty's government stands in effect that, unless payments were made in full in the sum of $262,000,000 as set forth in the communication from the United States treasury dated May 25, 1934, the United Kingdom would fall within the effects of the recent legislation mentioned in Paragraph 7 of your note, so that the payment of this amount is regarded as the only alternative to suspension of all payment.

The attorney-general has advised me that, in his opinion, the debtors' government which under the ruling of his office of May 5, 1934, are not at present considered in default because of partial payments made on earlier installments, would have to pay only the amount of the installment due June 15, 1934—for Great Britain $55,670,765.05—in order to remain outside the scope of the act.

Second, in regard to the record cited by the British government of its loans to its allies and the fact that his majesty's government has given up great sums of money to those loan contracts, this government must emphasize the complete independence between the aforementioned transactions and the debt contracted by his majesty's government to this government.

The British government undertook to borrow under its own name and on its own credit standing, and repayment was not made contingent upon the fate of debts due to the British government.

Third, this government notes with disappointment that declaration of his majesty's government that "while suspending further payments until it becomes possible to discuss an ultimate settlement of intergovernmental war debts with a reasonable prospect of agreement, they have no intention of repudiating their obligations and will be prepared to enter upon further discussion of the subject at any time when, in the opinion of the president, such discussion would be likely to produce results of value."

In effect, this government reads the declaration of his majesty's government to mean that it will fail to meet any further payments on the debt due to the United States as evidenced by the settlement of June 10, 1923, until this government shall first scale down this debt to an amount which his majesty's government might be willing to concede.

This declaration appears to represent insistence by his majesty's government that before it makes any payment whatsoever it must be assured of a settlement satisfactory to it and not necessarily in accordance with any accepted standards of payment or readjustment of the amounts due.

The only indications before this government of the extent to which his majesty's government has proposed to meet its obligations are the small fractions of the sums due mentioned by his majesty's representative in the course of the discussions in the spring and autumn of last year referred to in your note of June 4.

INITIATION OF PLAN BY DEBTOR URGED.

Adhering to the opinion so often expressed by the United States government, a situation of this kind necessarily calls for the initiation of proposals by the debtor and not by the creditor.

Should his majesty's government wish to put forward proposals for the resumption of payments, this government would be glad to entertain and discuss them informally.

For instance, no proposal has ever been presented to this government looking toward payments in kind to an extent that might be found mutually practicable and agreeable.

In conclusion, may I refer to the statement made by the president in his message to congress on June 1: "The American people would not be disposed to place an impossible burden upon their debtors, but are nevertheless in a just position to ask that substantial sacrifices be made to meet these debts."

Accept, excellency, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

CORDELL HULL.

U. S. TELLS BRITONS TO ADVANCE OFFER

house foreign affairs committee to study the possibility of accepting tin in payment of debts.

He said Britain controls 80 per cent of world production, while the United States uses one-half of the total output.

"Tin is absolutely indispensable to American automobile, airplane and munitions industries," Caldwell said tonight, "and we do not have reserves sufficient for more than a year."

Applicable to All. The suggestion to the British government was believed applicable to all the debtor governments, including soviet Russia, and might open the way for acceptance of millions of dollars worth of commodities which the United States normally imports each year.

The two commodities which it was believed that Britain might most profitably offer in payment of her debts are rubber and tin. The United States each year imports approximately $87,000,000 worth of tin and huge amounts of rubber. The major supplies of both of these commodities are in the hands of the British states settlements.

Hull categorically rejected the re-soning put forward by British government in her note of June 4, announcing suspension of all further debt payments.

He informed the British government that it was clearly Britain's responsibility to initiate discussions looking to a revision of the debt agreements.

This, Hull said, Britain had failed to do with the exception of the totally unsatisfactory offer made last autumn by Sir Leith Ross, special agent of the British treasury, who held a series of conferences with President Roosevelt.

Rejected 10-cent Basis.

It was understood at that time that the British offer was a settlement of 10 cents on the dollar in a lump sum. President Roosevelt rejected that offer.

Hull said that in effect the American government had interpreted the British note to mean that Great Britain would make no further debt payments until the United States "shall first scale down this debt to an amount which his majesty's government might be willing to concede."

The declaration appears to represent insistence by his majesty's government that before it makes any payment whatsoever it must be assured of a settlement satisfactory to it and not necessarily in accordance with any accepted standards of payment or readjustment of the amount due.

No Concrete Offers.

"The only indications before this government of the extent to which his majesty's government has proposed to meet its obligations are the small fractions of the sums due mentioned by his majesty's representative in the course of the discussions in the spring and autumn of last year referred to in your note of June 4. Adhering to the opinion so often expressed by the United States government, a situation of this kind necessarily calls for the initiation of proposals by the debtor and not by the creditor."

Hull also reminded the British government that it had taken a false step in putting forward in its note of June 4 the claim that under the Johnson act it would be obligated to pay $262,000,000 to the United States.

Referring to his suggestion that Britain might put forward some offer for making debt payments in goods or services, Hull said:

"Should his majesty's government wish to put forward proposals for the resumption of payments, this government would be glad to entertain and discuss them informally."

No Proposals Made.

"For instance, no proposal has ever been presented to this government looking towards payments in kind to an extent that might be found mutually practicable and agreeable."

Any proposals of this or of a similar character which promise mutual benefit will be carefully considered for eventual submission to the American congress.

Hull concluded by repeating the statement made by President Roosevelt in his message to congress on June 1 that:

"The American people would not be disposed to place an impossible burden upon their debtors, but are nevertheless in a just position to ask that substantial sacrifices be made to meet these debts."

FRENCH DEFAULT NOTE CARRIES NEW OFFER

PARIS, June 12.—(AP)—A default note understood to contain a request for "final settlement" on a new basis of war debts was cabled to Washington tonight by the French government.

The contents of the note, the fourth in succession advising that France will make no payment on a debt installment, were not revealed, but it was written under conditions which indicated that some proposal for a discussion was included.

The cabinet made its formal decision today to make no payment on June 15, with former Premier Edouard Herriot, now minister without portfolio, still advocating payment.

Herriot, whose cabinet fell with the first default, was said to have been the only cabinet member favoring payment and to have insisted that a request for a final settlement be included in the communication.

The position of Herriot was recognized in a communique after the cabinet meeting, which was attended by President Albert Lebrun.

Herriot stood alone in the plea for payment, his former colleagues having switched their position since Great Britain recently announced that not even a token payment will be made.

It was not revealed here whether the note will be delivered to the state department at Washington tomorrow or will be held until Friday when the installment becomes due.

MOTHER GETS LIFE IN DEATH OF BABY

time in his career that he had acted as judge and jury. Guillebeau telephoned him at his home Tuesday night asking for an order to hold the woman at the tower pending further developments in the case. Judge Moore had met out the life sentence after a three-hour trial.

Led From Courtroom.

With staring eyes, the masculine-featured young woman heard the judge's words. A few minutes later, she arose and, with heavy, measured tread was led from the courtroom, while a throng of the curious followed.

Alone with her emotions, Mrs. Peoples, who had no womanly refinement, did the woman shed tears. When the prosecutor read that portion of her intended suicide note which asked that her little one be buried in her arms, muffled sobs were heard. Thereafter, she sat staring, staring, as if into a great black void with no beginning and no end.

Judge Expresses Sympathy.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Moore expressed sympathy for the woman.

"I don't see how the future holds much for you one way or the other," the court said. "I believe you loved your baby, and through your distorted mind what you did seemed to you the best thing under the circumstances. The only hope I can hold out for you is that your baby is now in a better world than this, and I hope that you will live so that when your time comes you will be reunited with your baby and be happy through all time thereafter."

And still the woman sat staring.

Upon the conclusion of the court's sentence there was no grand rush of sympathy from friends. The grandfather of the woman sat stolidly near. An elderly uncle also was in court. Friendly counsel from her home town, Chatsworth, did their duty.

And still the woman stared. But out there in the corridor there came a still small voice. A little gray-haired woman brushed past the deputy sheriff assigned to Mrs. Peoples' custody. She thrust herself upon the breast of the staring woman.

"May God pity you," she sobbed. "God knows what is in your heart. He knows you love your baby. He is all-merciful and all-understanding. Trust Him, and He will see you through."

Woman Breaks Down.

And then the floodgates of grief were opened, and Mrs. Peoples stumbled blindly into the elevator and began her journey down.

The little gray-haired woman gave her name as Mrs. Robert A. Heister, of 142 Merritt street.

"Interest in the case? No," she said, "except that my heart bleeds for this poor creature."

And though the little woman had probably never read Oscar Wilde, she then put into her own unaffected words the thought which caused the poet to muse:

"For who can tell to what red hell his heartless soul may stray?"

The trial of Mrs. Peoples lasted less than three hours. The state introduced witnesses to show that the baby had died by strangulation caused by the administration of acid.

Internes from Grady hospital told of the care which had been exercised to save the life of the woman after she had swallowed a large quantity of the caustic.

Other witnesses testified as to her demeanor in the hotel. The prosecutor, John H. Hudson, offered two hot irons and a spoon in evidence. The spoon had been borrowed from a restaurant, and a witness testified to that.

Not Sane, Say Witnesses.

Routine questions by defense counsel called forth the opinions of laymen and of doctors that the woman's act was not the act of a sane person.

Last of all came the defendant's statement. In a matter-of-fact way, stopping but twice when her voice choked with emotion, Mrs. Peoples told the court that she killed her baby because she loved it and could not bear the thought of having the child brought up, and possibly mistreated, by anyone else.

"Of course I loved my baby," she said. "If I hadn't loved her I couldn't have done what I did. I couldn't let her starve."

Mrs. Peoples said that she had no money to buy milk for the child, and that she had appealed in vain to her estranged husband, W. H. Peoples, for help.

The defense was conducted by William B. Hartfield, of Atlanta, and H. H. Anderson, C. N. King, H. N. Steed, of Chatsworth, Ga., Mrs. Peoples' home town.

Louisiana House Beats Move To Muzzle Press

BATON ROUGE, La., June 12.—(AP)—The house of representatives after exhaustive debate Monday night rejected the Pegasus resolution censuring the press for "dealing in personalities" in news reports on the legislature and warning them that continued similar references would result in the house withdrawing press privileges.

The vote was 55 ayes and 33 nays.

An hour of heated exchanges on the floor preceded the house's refusal to accept the resolution, offered by Representative William Pegues, of Desoto. The debate was climaxed by an impassioned declaration by Buie, of Franklin, in which he said, waving his hands toward the tightly packed galleries:

"If I was employing this legislature to work for me and I came in here and found it wasting time on something as trivial as this resolution, I would fire it on the spot."

FERA Traffic Official To Confer Here Today

Consideration of proposed traffic surveys in all cities in Georgia with a population over 25,000 will be given today at a conference between Burton W. Marsh, assistant director of traffic surveys for the southeast for FERA, and Keller Melton, director of safety for the Georgia Relief Association.

Mr. Marsh will arrive in Atlanta this morning from Washington and will immediately confer with Mr. Melton, and DeFord Smith, in charge of survey work already in progress in Atlanta.

Thursday night Mr. Marsh will address those engaged in the traffic survey here, as well as the traffic and advisory survey committees named by the city and of which C. A. Smith, of the Georgia Power Company, is president.

Mr. Marsh has a nationwide reputation as director of safety and traffic and was lent to the government by the AAA. He was formerly in charge of surveys in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

At 8:15 o'clock tonight Mr. Marsh will speak over radio station WGST.

Pastor Accepts Call.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 12.—(AP)—Accepting a call from the Grove Street Gospel church, Hendersonville, N. C., the Rev. F. G. McKenzie, pastor of the Grace Reformed Episcopal church here, today announced his resignation. He will take up his new charge on July 1.

ITALO-GERMAN PACT SOUGHT BY MUSSOLINI

II Duce Also Seeks Germany Re-entry Into League of Nations.

ROME, June 12.—(AP)—An outline of a plan for bringing Germany back into the League of Nations and for closer German-Italian co-operation has been prepared by Premier Mussolini, who will meet Chancellor Hitler Thursday, source close to the premier revealed today.

II Duce has worked out a plan for his talk with Hitler which he hopes will result in checking France's system of alliances, it was stated.

The work is being done at Mussolini's summer home at Rocca delle Carmine, where he is awaiting the historic meeting which will take place at the villa Pisani at Stra, not far from Venice.

Accompanied by his son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano, head of the press bureau, Mussolini is working in the same scene where he retired to sketch the plan of the four-power pact he outlined in 1933.

Meanwhile, at Venice elaborate plans were made for the visit of the German chancellor, who will arrive by airplane Thursday morning and will motor to the villa where Mussolini intends to spend Wednesday night.

ATLANTA, GA., JUNE 13, 1934.

EASTERN TIME FOR ATLANTA.

Councilman J. Frank Beck is to be commended for insisting Monday that Atlanta voters be permitted to express their preference in the September primary on establishing eastern time in Atlanta, as against the present central time.

Conceding that Atlantans voted against the change several years ago, Councilman Beck urged that the temper of the people may have changed since then, and that inasmuch as council had already approved a referendum on daylight saving time for Atlanta during summer, the year-round eastern time question should be included on the ballot.

At the time the referendum on daylight saving was authorized by council that body defeated a resolution by Councilman Beck to include the eastern time question, its opponents contending that such a move would confuse the voters. This contention does not appear sound, for certainly the voters of Atlanta are sufficiently intelligent to read their ballots and vote according to their preferences.

Atlanta is lagging behind in this matter, as is evidenced by the action of such leading cities as Detroit, Toledo and Cincinnati. There are many who can recall when central time extended as far east as the boundary between Pennsylvania and Ohio. After many years of trial it was found that this division was impractical, and a change was made to the meridian which runs close to the western boundary of Ohio, and that meridian is so close to Atlanta that it might be termed as directly on the line.

Atlanta's interests are mostly toward the east and the city time should synchronize with the principal cities of that section, as does that of Macon, Athens, Augusta and Savannah, instead of with El Paso, Texas, and Cheyenne, Wyo. Cincinnati not only operates on eastern time, but year after year adds daylight saving.

Give the people an opportunity to vote on the subject. If they want a change, let's make it; if they do not, a vote on the matter will do no harm. Members of council should be broad enough not to impose personal preferences on the public in this matter, as the people have a right to live by whatever time they wish.

THE COST OF WAR.

Disregarding all other features of the British note to the United States regarding her default on the war debt payments, due this month, the outstanding impression left by it is the terrible cost of war.

It has been 16 years since peace was sounded at the close of the World War. And today finds the nations of the world helpless under the burden of a war that ended almost two decades ago.

The British note calls attention to the fact that England received from the United States loans to the amount of $4,277,000,000. England herself loaned to other allied nations the amount of $7,800,000,000.

One has but to consider these two nations alone to realize how wasteful and awesome is the cost of war. When one considers this nation's loans to France and other nations and the financial burdens imposed upon the peoples of all nations to pay the cost of war, the result is staggering.

It is almost inconceivable that nations should be contemplating war with this object lesson still on their budget books.

And yet the financial cost of war is the least of the considerations. The cost of caring for those who were wounded and for the dependents of those who lost their lives, a solemn duty of the nation, will mount far beyond the cost of the war. And the rows of white crosses stretching for miles in the war cemeteries of the world should speak more eloquently than financial budgets against war.

The scandal of the armament and munitions makers has recently been exposed in magazines and books. The whole horror and cost and uselessness of war stands exposed more completely than ever before in history. Yet talk of war goes on.

HOME CANNING.

With berries, peaches and other early fruits ripening, and all forms of garden vegetables coming to the stage where they are ready for consumption, provision should be made to have all these splendid articles of food canned and preserved for use at seasons when they are not on the market. Now while they are plentiful the cost is low, and all else that is required is some cans and a little work.

Georgia's live-at-home campaign, which in the past two years has resulted in keeping in the state millions of dollars that previously had gone north and west for foodstuffs, will be pushed vigorously again this summer, according to a recent announcement made by the Georgia Agricultural College extension department.

Initial experiments last year in the establishment of rural public canning establishments and home demonstration work in canning fruits and vegetables were so successful, and met with such satisfactory reception on the part of farm women, that the extension department is encouraged to make plans to carry on practical demonstrations of canning in every county of the state this summer.

Schools designed to teach the better methods of canning will be held in every section of the state under direction of the county home demonstration agents, in co-operation with civic organizations, and in those counties where there are no regular home demonstration agents, expert field workers will be in charge of the schools.

Thus farm families will be supplied at very small cost with an abundance of canned fruit and vegetables for the winter months, and thousands of dollars' worth of these necessities of life that have gone to waste in past years will be preserved. In addition, families in the cities and towns may learn how to can the products of near-by farms, which they can purchase at reasonable prices, thus providing a needed market for the farm surplus.

Benefits to be gained by increased home canning include a balanced and healthful diet during the winter months when vegetables and fruits must be purchased, and less strain on the pocketbooks of those who adopt this sensible method of providing for the future.

GEORGIA DENTISTS.

Georgia dentists met in Atlanta this week and conducted a most successful convention.

The dentist is a much maligned man, but a most indispensable one. He has occupied for years a position in the humorous world which is to be compared with that occupied by the mother-in-law. The jokes about dentists and painless dentists and the old magazines in the dentist's office are legion.

Yet the facts are that no profession has made more rapid strides than the dental profession. The past decade has seen a vast improvement in dental methods, so that a visit to the dentist today is really painless in comparison with visits of a few years ago. Dental surgery, the use of X-ray and the development of orthodontia have all contributed to the advancement of dental science.

Georgia has always had a splendid array of men in her dental association. Their annual clinics and conventions have undoubtedly contributed much to the annual raising of dental standards.

While it cannot be truthfully said that a visit to the dentist's office is a pleasure, it may be said that by education and by advancing his own knowledge the dentist is not now the feared person he was in the bygone years.

Mussolini Speaks.

The great Benito, in whose country trains run on time, has given the world another piece of his mind. "Mankind must not expect a return of prosperity," he said recently in a "grand oration." "We must expect to see the standard of living go down in every country."

Happy prospect! Why must it be so? Mussolini gives the answer: "War is unavoidable. War is part of human nature. We must prepare for war." Just when the human race gains control of the forces of nature, when the one wondrous invention after the other comes out, when there is plenty for everybody and to spare, we must envisage a lowering of the standard of life. Quer world! But Signor Benito Mussolini knows better. War is not inherent in human nature. That saying is but a mere trick on the part of those who wish an excuse for war. I have to laugh when I read such statements as: Italy is ready to fight for its rights. Italy? Does he mean the Italian peasant?

When you read: Russia says... or France wants... what does it mean? It means that some fellow in the government, or a group of fellows, want to say or want something. That's all. The peoples don't want war. You can whip them up for war, to be sure, but it is not their nature. For the tenth time since Mussolini came to power there will be a general reduction of wages and salaries in Italy. This announcement came simultaneously with the news that Italy intends to spend one billion lire on the renovation of her air force this year. And yet a whole lot of people go around saying what a great man Mussolini is.

War This Year?
My conscience is an ex-soldier, "grand mutilé de la guerre," one of the "great mutilated of the war." He lost both arms, the poor fellow, and works around with a pair of mechanical hands. He is a member of some ex-soldier organization and faithfully attends that body's meetings. Coming home late one night, he rang my door bell, it was after one, and with an evident disquietude began to tell me that several of the speakers at the meeting he had attended that night had predicted war for August, this year. Their predictions were based, he said, on the grave tension in the Saar region, where several French divisions are "standing to" on war-footing. The next morning in fact, one newspaper brought the astonishing revelation that the Belgian prime minister had warned the world that Belgium would not join in a preventative war against Germany, "as France is now contemplating."

The report of the Belgian prime minister's speech, sent out by the official Belgian news agency, "Belga," was printed by the European edition of the Chicago Tribune. Not a single French newspaper carried the news. I searched every Parisian sheet, 50 or so in all, for confirmation and comment. Nothing doing. The word must have gone out from the ministry of foreign affairs to keep the lid on the Belgian revelation. But the Chicago Tribune was apparently overlooked.

SO YOU WANT TO GO BACK TO THE SAN?

The finest testimonial I know to the great value of a course at a sanatorium is the feeling which virtually all graduates have for the old school, they look back upon the year or more of their training there with pleasant recollections and rather long to return for a visit if not for post-graduate courses. The relatives and friends of patients get some impression of this spirit but the outside world knows no more about life in a tuberculosis hospital than it does about life in a hospital for mental disease. A lot of people still harbor quaint notions of the horrors of the "sanatorium" or the "mad house."

This loneliness for the pleasant life at the san has something to do with the complaint of a returned patient, I suspect. She describes some of the therapeutic exercises in her own words, such as not only keeping her dishes and eating utensils separate but boiling them all for 20 minutes every time she uses them, and insisting that she must never use a wash basin or bath tub that is to be used by other persons. These are all harsh and unjustifiable requirements, but if the patient has active lung tuberculosis well advanced and is presumably giving off the germs of tuberculosis constantly, for the sake of her sister's tuberculosis, hence presumably not giving off germs at all, such precautions become sheer cruelty.

But from the context it seems likely that the sister's husband is concerned only about protecting his young children from the risk, and that is ample excuse for any rules he may find it necessary to lay down in the circumstances. For young children are most susceptible to tuberculosis, and must be kept as much apart from friends or relatives who have it, even quiescent or arrested or nearly so, as is humanly possible.

The patient back from the san says it is this attitude of "outsiders" that makes the ex-patient often long for the safe shelter of the san, where at least he is not regarded as a menace. You see how it is?

This graduate makes an interesting observation: "The fact that I am most conscientious about keeping the rules the doctors have given me makes no difference to these people (my relatives) and the brother-in-law. It would make no difference if they knew I had negative sputum as I have had for several years. They view me with suspicion when they see that I will use a sputum cup, or paper napkins, instead of expectorating into my handkerchief, as they do. Yet many of them have been in the san, where they must have sufficient immunity to make them reasonably safe against infection now."

Obviously this graduate learned her lessons at the san! She is quite right about it all, so far as it applies to the adults. She is terribly wrong if she resents the wise attitude of the father of those children.

Fort Valley Church Struck by Lightning

Fort Valley, Ga., June 12.

Lightning made a target of the Methodist church here, striking the northeast corner of the building. Brick were sent toppling to the sidewalk and the littered covered area was roped off for the safety of pedestrians.

The Best of Lawyers Can't Expect Big Fees in a Small Town

By Robert Quillen

Economists assume that the poor are doomed to their unhappy state because they lack the intelligence to get above it. In many instances that is undoubtedly true. The simple-minded cannot successfully compete with the brilliant.

But poverty, as a rule, is the result of early environment or deliberate choice. Many fathers, dissatisfied with their own measure of success, educate their sons to equip them for a higher calling—a higher calling being one that provides a larger income.

But like father like son still holds good in the majority of cases, especially in the case of the lawyer. The son's ambition is to be like dad. And this ambition, plus the influence of environment, usually persuades the son to follow the course of least resistance and continue the work of his father.

In a fishing village the boys become fishermen, in a mill village they drift into the mill, and in a farming community—though perhaps to a less extent—they become farmers.

And when they choose their calling, they also choose the size of their income. That must be true, in the nature of things, for some services are worth much to the world and some are worth little.

The farmer will say that the world cannot live without him, and that is true in a sense. But while it cannot live without farmers, it can live without the service of any particular farmer.

The worth of a man is determined by the number who could take his place. And the reward in each calling is gauged by the world's need of the individual and the amount of money the trade as a whole can draw out of the world's pocket.

No matter how brilliant a plow hand may be, he cannot get rich as long as he follows a plow. It isn't enough to be a good fisherman. To catch big fish, you must go where big fish are.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON.

TUGWELL WASHINGTON, June 12.—The Tugwell case was only a public skirmish to screen a real political movement underneath.

It was started by several conservative southern democrats, who are dissatisfied at heart with the way the New Deal is going. They do not like the NRA, AAA, or even the PWA spending, although they cannot afford to say so publicly as yet. They did not like the gold policy, but they have had to keep more or less quiet about that also.

The nomination of Professor Tugwell as undersecretary of agriculture gave them an opportunity to release some pent-up feelings without exposing their position. They jumped at it.

HEARING The senate agriculture committee hearing showed how they felt. They knew they could not defeat Tugwell's promotion and they did not care to. They merely wanted to talk about their own attitudes and they did.

No one went so far as to break with the New Deal, but only so far as to express displeasure with radicalism.

The whole show smacked of second-rate political vaudeville, involving stump speeches and sharp side remarks, much the same as in the Wirt hearing.

Tugwell handled himself rather modestly and quietly, as if he did not want to antagonize anyone. He was amply protected by the liberals on the committee, including Senators Norris, Wheeler and Bone. The crowd whooped and booed. The professor seemed to have the advantage with the ladies in the audience because he was younger and more handsome than the senators present.

Mrs. Tugwell was so bored she went home after the second hour. It was just that bad.

PORTENT The serious portent of the thing was entirely lost on the participants and on the audience.

It is that there will be more Wirt hearings and more Tugwell hearings in one form or another as long as the New Deal continues to encounter the private disapproval of the more conservative element among its own supporters. Day by day, the opposition is getting bolder.

Wirt was not important. Professor Tugwell is only a little more so. The underlying motives behind each will undoubtedly continue to grow in importance as the newness of the New Deal wears off.

PINK The senate never was able to find out what Professor Tugwell really was—a socialist, a democrat, or a what-not. If the senators had called upon Tugwell's friends for the answer, they would have found that he is rated among his intimates as "a parlor pink." That is about the only phrase which accurately describes his political views.

It is a term coined many years ago by red agitators to describe scornfully a diluted radical. It implies such things as white-collar liberalism, a rejection of both socialism and communism, a passive agitator without political moorings.

It is also the consensus among Tugwell's associates that his pinkish hue has faded several shades since he has had the responsibilities of public office.

If you compare his 1931 speeches with his 1934 speeches, you will get the idea. He has whispered to several pals that those old addresses have come back to haunt him like forgotten ghosts of the past. He would like to tear them up if he could. Not being able to do so, he must defend them as best he can.

Nothing will make a man grow away from radicalism faster than responsibility.

CAPITAL The inside situation is working around now to the point where the investment bankers are going to promote the capital finance market.

They have been virtually on strike since the securities act was passed. That may have been because they were afraid of the securities act or because no big financing could be done.

Beginning June 16, investment bankers can no longer be private bankers. A number of houses (unlike Morgan's) have chosen to be investment bankers and nothing else. They can have no other source of revenue.

That means, if they are to live, they will have to get busy and stir up some capital financing. They will.

NOTES Professor Tugwell had a neat way of escaping verbal punishment in the senate hearings. When he got into a corner, he started talking academically over the heads of his hearers.

When Senator Long walked in, a committee member whispered: "Here comes the Durante of the senate."

Another committee member said privately to a colleague: "What I don't like about college professors is that they think they are the only ones in the world who are honest and intelligent." His colleague replied that when the administration really wanted impartial administrators it went after college professors or army officers.

On Russian Life. Anyone who has read one or more of a hundred versions of the truth about Russia in the last 15 years has a pretty definite idea of the sort of people the Russians are. The Russians wear bears, boots and smocks, tear fish with their hands, chuck debris over their shoulders to be ground into the floor which is never scrubbed or swept and come away from the plain plank board which is the characteristic Russian table wiping their hands on their trousers. A queer, plain, simple people, the Russians, who bother themselves not at all with the pretty but artificial amenities and fixings of life as the aristocrats and bourgeois know it. It said so in a thousand books and Sunday-supplement articles of the expose type. It said, terrible things about the Russians in these books and articles. Your correspondent had read many of these honest, straight-from-the-shoulder revelations and therefore was prepared to rough it when the invitation came to break bread, probably black bread, at the Russian embassy.

The thing was, however, that the lunch hour in Hollywood. Not seeing Lil Tashman's gay and lovely countenance or hearing her hearty "Hello, there," we're at our Hollywood hotel, just now—the purple of the Russian proletrariat and American business dress might be intensely fastidious in such an atmosphere. There were some masquerade costumes in town who might have some Russian tackle for hire, including moujik whiskers, but perhaps it would be all right to wear one's own suit and just let the socks fall down and not take too much pains with the adjustment of the necktie.

What? A Butler? Your correspondent is at the Red Embassy? ways being disillusioned. On the Mississippi river he met a characteristic steamboat captain who spoke with his teeth and his hands and didn't utter a word even when his school of iron barges grounded on a bar. Primo Carnera had turned out intelligent, gently and even witty. And now, at the door of the embassy of the U. S. S. R., instead of any muddy peasant or hairy lumberjack, he found in the conventional hall a rig stood by, taking the hats and directing the people upstairs.

Maybe this was the wrong embassy. But that couldn't be so because there, hanging in dignity from the golden balustrade was the hammer-and-sickle device on a silken banner. And red was the color of the furniture, the carpet and the hangings. The walls were everywhere, proud, confident and decorous.

But, of course, this embassy was an inheritance from the Russia of the czar. The soviets had not built it. If the soviets had been starting fresh, possibly their embassy would have been a cabin out on the edge of town. But when they took over their country, their embassy properties in foreign capitals were included in the change of management and it was a foolish attempt to abandon this beautiful building in which Congressmen Hamilton Fish himself would have been at ease.

DAMAGES OF $500,000 ASKED IN MOVIE FIGHT

St. Petersburg, Fla., Independent Operator Sues Owner of Chain of Theaters.

Damages aggregating $500,000 were demanded in civil suits filed in Atlanta Tuesday by John J. Gillyool, operator of an independent theater at St. Petersburg, Fla., against F. J. Sparks, operator of a chain of theaters in Florida, and nine motion picture distributors.

In a suit for $450,000 filed in federal district court, Gillyool alleges he was damaged by reason of alleged restraint of trade and a monopoly against contracting in business, all of which is contrary, the suit said, to an act of congress approved July 2, 1930.

In this alleged monopoly, the bill charges, Sparks and the motion picture distributors caused Gillyool to abandon the operation of his business in the Florida city.

The second suit, for $50,000, was filed in city court of Atlanta. The petition accompanying this charge that Gillyool was "held up to ridicule and charged with the crime of false swearing." This suit asks damages of Sparks, Universal Film Exchanges and John T. Ezell, listed as branch manager of the distributing agency.

Distributors and producers of motion pictures, Gillyool alleges, compelled him to accept contracts for moving picture films after Sparks, and without protection as to delivery of first, second and third run pictures.

Louisianans Protest Increased Taxation

BATON ROUGE, La., June 12.—(AP)—Resolutions calling for "resort to force" in assertion of constitutional rights "when peaceful means fail" and demanding property tax relief without additional or new taxes were submitted tonight to a monster state-wide mass meeting of milling thousands assembled in protest against the state administration's legislature tax program and general policies.

The resolutions, laid before an enormous crowd brought to the capital by special trains and almost every known transportation means from every principal city of the state, framed the threat of force at the outset and "denounced any attempt to increase the burden of taxation in Louisiana."

175 Gallons of Corn, Truck, Auto Seized

County police captured approximately 175 gallons of corn whisky, confiscated two vehicles and made one arrest on Holcomb road Tuesday night.

Lieutenant A. T. Butler and Patrolmen J. B. Wallace and A. P. Douglas captured a truck carrying 169 gallons of whisky and placed a man who gave his name as J. J. Parks, of a West View drive address, under arrest. Parks later posted a $300 bond at Fulton tower. A short while after the first capture the same officers gave chase to a heavy coach which they took, along with five gallons of whisky, but the driver escaped afoot through some woods.

MANY NEW FEATURES ADDED TO LANE STORE

H. C. Naylor, president of Lane Drug Stores, interviewed yesterday on the completion of remodeling operations in the Lane store in the Henry Grady hotel, expressed complete satisfaction with the appointments and arrangements of the new store.

pany for a number of years in various capacities and is extremely proud of his new store. In addition to his managerial duties, Mr. Hammond is one of the registered pharmacists who fills prescriptions at this store.

In Mr. Naylor's opinion the Henry Grady store is one of the finest drug stores in the entire country and has many novel features which are not found in any drug store in the south.

Among these is the only automatic dish and glass washer in the city. This machine forms a part of the new fountain and patrons see dishes cleaned and sterilized before their eyes.

Another innovation is an arrangement of booths-for-two where couples may enjoy fountain service in seclusion. The new prescription department is modernly compact and efficient and is in charge of registered pharmacists.

According to Mr. Naylor the single item bringing about the greatest improvement was the installation of a complete air conditioning plant. This equipment enables the store to be supplied with a complete change of cooled and cleansed air every 48 seconds.

The perfume bar and cosmetic departments of the new Lane store are in charge of three graduate cosmeticians, namely, Mrs. Sara Grant, Mrs. Ruby King and Miss Gladys Whitehead, all of whom have been thoroughly trained in special beauty culture by experts in New York city and in other schools. These cosmeticians are in position to give correct and unbiased opinions on all makes of cosmetics.

Journalism-delaying debate in the senate.

Anxious to send congress home, but hesitant about relying on administration powers to avert or terminate industrial strife in the steel towns, their purpose was to prune as many controversies as possible from the measure.

Prior to the White House conference there was talk of bringing the revamped bill up in the senate on Friday or Saturday.

Housing Bill On List.

As for other legislation, democratic leaders today let it be known they were counting on enacting the administration housing bill, the railway pension measure, curtailment of permanent appropriations, the deficiency bill carrying drought relief appropriations, and the Indian and grazing bills and also confirming the nomination of Rexford G. Tugwell as undersecretary of agriculture.

While the house worked toward passage of the housing measure, the senate today quickly disposed of the minor legislation on the list, and planned to begin tomorrow a drive aimed at disposing of the remainder of the schedule by Saturday. Leaders were hopeful, but not confident of reaching this objective. Several uncertainties persisted, notably how long the debate on the Tugwell nomination would run.

It was thought possible that both the housing bill and the deficiency appropriation measure, authorizing huge relief expenditures, might become involved in time-consuming dispute. And finally, there was the question whether the Wagner bill could be worked into an acceptable form.

property out of which the alleged judgments can be collected.

In asking the ouster of the commissioners, the petitioners charge diverting funds and failure to provide a fund from which judgments against the city can be paid.

The commissioners were charged with using city funds to "buy themselves and other employees expensive automobiles" and illegally expending "money of the said city of Birmingham for trips to far-away places of different officials."

The $3,000,000 fire in February was brought into the suit, the petition charging that they (the commissioners) have "conducted illegal and useless investigations of departments of the city."

Several months ago when the city commissioners announced a sales tax ordinance, imposing a 2 per cent on gross retail sales, would be enacted, citizens groups organized and circulated recall petitions. The sales tax, the commissioner said, was the only way to avert a receivership, since prospective revenue would not meet the requirements for amortizing bonds falling due. The sales tax ordinance was later withdrawn.

For several weeks part of the city's expenses have been met with scrip.

NEW R. A. M. CHAPTER FORMED AT BUCKHEAD

Organization of a chapter of Royal Arch Masons, under dispensation of the grand chapter of Georgia was perfected in the lodge rooms of Sardis Lodge No. 107 at Buckhead Tuesday night.

Officers elected were: F. A. Fraser, high priest; George Mathieson, king, and A. W. White, scribe.

Those prominent in organization of the lodge were J. S. Thompson, George Donaldson and Judge Luther F. Rosser. The chapter will meet every second and fourth Tuesday of the month.

MAYORS INVITED TO PARLEY HERE

Key Seeks Changes Giving Cities Greater Voice in Own Government.

Mayor James L. Key Tuesday invited 500 mayors of Georgia cities to attend a conference here July 14 to consider liberalization of government by municipalities.

Councilman John A. White, author of the council resolution seeking the conference, Tuesday afternoon urged all the executives to attend, citing the fact that special consideration proposed equalization of taxes and tax reforms will be among the major matters to be considered.

The gathering will be held at 11 o'clock on the morning of July 14 in the assembly room at the state capitol, and, according to the official invitation dispatched by Key Tuesday, there will be consideration of plans to obtain a greater voice in city administration by cities themselves and for a "fairer share" of state revenues.

"There has developed in cities and towns within recent years a definite need for this kind of convention," Mayor Key's invitation said. "Cities find themselves more or less the object of much legislation which they do not desire, and find themselves neglected in the matter of legislation which they should have—all of these things depending on a system by which, in matters of local legislation, the local representatives are the final arbiters, and, by reason of legislative courtesy, only representatives from counties affected give any attention to these local matters."

"There should be some general law for the government of cities and towns so that all these matters are not left to the whims of accidental representation. This convention can be of wonderful use and benefit to the people of this state if we can eliminate from our legislative agenda thousands of local bills which should not require their time and would place in the hands of those who pay the bills the right to determine what sort of government they shall have."

Collector of Revenue Ousted by Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today asked Alvin F. Fix, collector of internal revenue in Philadelphia, to resign by tomorrow.

This was announced by Secretary Morgenthau, who has been directing an investigation into charges that political contributions have been sought by members of the Philadelphia staff of the treasury.

Morgenthau said he has sent to William E. Brown, assistant collector at Philadelphia, a copy of charges that have been lodged against him. "I am taking this step in order to protect myself," Morgenthau said in describing his action as "technical." He explained that legal procedure required that he send a copy of the charges to the accused.

PHILADELPHIA, June 12.—(AP)—Alvin F. Fix, who resigned as collector of internal revenue in this district was asked by President Roosevelt, did not indicate tonight that he would comply immediately, and said the matter was one for further consideration.

SPORTSMAN PILOTS PLAN 'AERO PICNIC' TO WARM SPRINGS

The first sportsman pilots' "aero picnic" to be staged by Atlanta amateur fliers will take place Sunday morning at 8 o'clock, when all of the privately owned planes at Candler field will take off for Warm Springs.

The picnic will be the first of a series of events planned by the private fliers at the field. Two outings probably will be held each month. Sunday, more than a dozen planes will be in the flight, and after lunch and a swim the pilots plan to return to Atlanta late in the afternoon. The object of the flight, says E. W. Hightower, well-known pilot and sponsor of the move, is to demonstrate what can be done by sportsman fliers, and to stimulate interest in aviation as a hobby. Hightower will fly the leading plane in the Sunday caravan.

BRITON REPORTED SLAIN BY CHINESE SMUGGLERS

HONGKONG, June 12.—(AP)—E. R. Collier, a British officer of Chinese customs, was reported slain and five Chinese officers were reported wounded by smugglers near Hoihow in meager dispatches reaching here today.

SENTIMENT MOUNTING AGAINST STEEL STRIKE

Elections Among Workers Show Favor for 'Company Union,' Say Employers.

PITTSBURGH, June 12.—(AP)—While union clocks hourly ticked nearer and nearer to time for a proposed nation-wide steel walkout several of the largest operators in the giant industry tonight announced primary elections among the workers show an overwhelming anti-strike sentiment.

They declared the voting for the specified purpose of choosing employee representatives to deal with employers, also shows that "about 90 per cent of the workers" are in favor of the present "company union" plan as opposed to the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers which has issued the strike call for the middle of the month.

The operators said today's balloting brought the total of workers to participate in such elections during the past two weeks to around 120,000.

De Broqueville Picks New Belgian Cabinet

BRUSSELS, Belgium, June 12.—(AP)—The Belgian cabinet, which resigned June 6, was reformed today with Count Charles De Broqueville retaining the premiership.

The other members of the cabinet are: National defense and vice presidency of the cabinet council, Albert Devez, liberal, and minister of defense in the previous cabinet; Foreign affairs, Henri Jaspar, minister of finance in the previous cabinet; Finances, Gustave Sap, former minister of public works.

Justice, Francois Bovesse, former minister of communications, discussed today at a White House conference table, and action tomorrow was promised.

A resolution to confer by congressional sanction sufficient powers on the national labor board to deal with such troubles was being framed to take the place of the Wagner bill, which, so close to adjournment, appeared to have little chance of passage.

MOVES TO FORESTALL STRIKE STUDIED IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—Quick passage of simplified labor legislation and possibly more direct moves to forestall a steel strike were

2 RECENT DEATHS ARE ATTRIBUTED TO BLACK WIDOW

SALT LAKE CITY, June 12.—(P)—The poisonous black widow spider was blamed for two deaths today, one here and another at Winona, Miss.

William Russell, a mill worker of Bauer, Utah, died last week of what was then thought to be blood poisoning from a small blister on his foot.

His physician today had decided the "blister" in reality was the wound caused by the bite of the spider, several of which had been found about the Russell home.

The Mississippi death was that of the 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Jennings, of Vaiden. The child was bitten on the eyelid Friday and died in a hospital later.

At Boise, Idaho, Dr. William Erkenbeck, of Grandview, bitten by a black spider nearly three weeks ago, was slowly recovering. He has been in a stupor since shortly after he was bitten and has been partially paralyzed.

They Tell the World of New-Found Health and Happiness

Sufferers from constipation will be interested in the following statements taken from actual letters written to the Sargon Company:

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills brought me my first lasting relief from constipation after I had suffered twenty long years. They regulated me perfectly. Constipation had practically ruined me. I took every kind of laxative I ever heard of, but they only aggravated my trouble and I kept getting worse. Sargon Soft Mass Pills entirely relieved me of this terrible affliction and I believe they will relieve any case of constipation that can be relieved by a medicine."—For more than ten years I suffered from constipation. I had to take some sort of laxative or cathartic almost daily. It has been thirty days since I completed the Sargon Pill treatment and I no longer have to take laxatives of any kind. Names of above endorers and many others will be furnished on request.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills are for sale by Jacobs Pharmacy Co. and all other good drug stores.—(adv.)

The new act automatically repeals those provisions for excess retaliatory tariffs—over and above the basic tariff—on automotive vehicles and parts, bicycles, paper products, and imported from such countries. Hereafter, the basic rate will be imposed on each article regardless of the tariff imposed on similar American articles by any other country.

In addition, one section of the 1930 act which stipulated that no tariff should be imposed on softwood timber and lumber from Mexico and Canada on the condition those countries give similar treatment to American goods.

ROOSEVELT SIGNS TARIFF MEASURE

President Assumes Sole Power To Fix Rates on Imported Articles.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(P)—President Roosevelt signed the administration's new tariff bill tonight and immediately assumed sole power to fix rates on all articles imported into the United States, and to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with other nations.

Under the new act, the president, for the next three years, has authority to increase or decrease existing tariffs by 50 per cent and to make new agreements with other nations in which excessive tariffs and other trade restrictions are to be eliminated on a reciprocal basis in the expectation of reviving American foreign trade.

The act was signed tonight after all customs houses in the country had closed for the day, so that all provisions of the new act, and minor changes in tariffs involving approximately 50 products, could go into effect simultaneously tomorrow morning at all ports of entry.

Under the 1930 tariff act, a provision was attached to the tariff rates in some categories of imports by which a higher duty was imposed on articles from any country which imposed a higher tariff than that designated in the act on similar American articles.

The new act automatically repeals those provisions for excess retaliatory tariffs—over and above the basic tariff—on automotive vehicles and parts, bicycles, paper products, and imported from such countries. Hereafter, the basic rate will be imposed on each article regardless of the tariff imposed on similar American articles by any other country.

MODEL PLANE CONTEST TO BE HELD AT AIRPORT

A model plane contest, sponsored by the Atlanta Model Airplane Club, will be held at Candler field at 10 o'clock this morning, according to the club headquarters at 64 Broad street.

Entrants will be in two classes: junior (under 10) and senior (10 or above). Non-club members will be allowed to compete by the payment of a small entrance fee. The contest, for which prizes are offered, will consist of four events.

Timber and lumber was repealed. These provisions were repealed by congress because of the conflict with provisions of nearly all American trade treaties calling for equality of treatment under most-favored-nation clauses.

The total tariffs collected on all dutiable articles amounted to less than $200,000 in 1933, of which $102,707 was collected on coal imported from Canada, Mexico and French Indo-China. Tariffs imposed on motor cars and parts amounted to $50,000; paper products $13,000, and bicycles $8,000.

The tariff legislation prohibits the transfer of any article between the dutiable and free lists.

Carrying out a principle laid down by congress, the act provides that no tariff discrimination be made in a pact with one country, the same shall apply to all other nations. This act to prevent discrimination by a foreign country, the president may suspend the application of the new duties to that country.

Authority to terminate at any time proclamations reducing or increasing import duties also is given the executive.

To preserve the flexible provisions of the 1930 tariff act, the legislation stipulates that it shall not be applied to any article imported into the United States coming under trade agreements entered into by this country.

Other important provisions of the act:

Forbids any construction of the law that will "authorize or cancel or reduce, in any manner, any of the indebtedness of any foreign country to the United States."

Extends the agreement concluded will run for three years. If not terminated at the end of that time, the agreement will continue unless canceled upon six months' notice.

Before agreements are concluded with foreign governments, reasonable public notice of intention to negotiate pacts must be given in order that affected industries may have an opportunity to be heard before a government agency to be designated by the president.

The president is directed to seek the advice of the tariff commission and the departments of state, agriculture and commerce before concluding agreements.

The act retains the preferential treatment to Cuba under existing treaty.

White House Statement.

The White House tonight issued this statement on the signing of the tariff bill:

"The adoption by congress of the policy of expanding the market of products of the United States by negotiated agreements reciprocally affording market opportunities for the products of other countries is an act of broad vision.

"The unprecedented shrinkage of world trade has been an important element in the present world condition. This step should help to reverse the trend and thereby to assist recovery.

"The use of the granted powers will require care to assure that each agreement makes a real contribution to recovery. Wise reciprocity between countries, each having regard to its own best interests, will be needed. Years have been spent in building barriers against mutual trade which have effectively impaired not only the foreign but also the domestic commerce of all countries. The restoration of healthier trade by the removal of mutual impediments will require time and patience but progress should be sure from the beginning and should accelerate."

Secretary Hull, who for a quarter of a century has been advocating enactment of such legislation, in a statement immediately after the president had signed the act, said, in part:

"The new act of congress giving to the president authority to enter into reciprocal commercial agreements with other governments for the purpose of promoting international commerce rests upon the broad policy of mutually profitable trade.

"It is inevitable in the circumstances that a return to true economic policies can be brought about only very gradually and over a substantial period of time. Patience is required; widespread changes in economic policies do not occur overnight. A lack of patience on the part of the people would be tragic because they themselves would be the victims of the continued collapse of the more important portions of international finance and commerce."

House Body Approves Industrial Plant Bill

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(P)—The house post office committee today approved the Randolph bill to authorize the establishment of an industrial plant at Redsville, W. Va., which has been advocated by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as a social experiment.

U. S. RELIEF COST SET 2 BILLION BY AUGUST

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(P)—Direct unemployment relief will have cost the federal government more than $2,000,000,000 by August 1.

Relief officials predict another billion will be added to that amount within the next year.

The Roosevelt administration will have spent $1,600,000,000 by July 1. In the 13 months since Harry L. Hopkins became federal emergency relief administrator.

That total does not include many millions spent by the agricultural adjustment administration for foodstuffs turned over to the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation for distribution to needy unemployed.

Direct unemployment relief appropriations in the last 23 months have totaled $1,150,000,000. First came $300,000,000 during the Hoover administration, allotted to states and taken from their federal aid highway funds.

Then the Roosevelt administration appropriated $500,000,000 for direct relief grants.

The public works administration gave $400,000,000 to finance the civil works program. Another $500,000,000 was voted by congress last winter. A bill for over $1,000,000,000 for direct relief and $250,000,000 for drought relief is now before congress.

Relief expenditures now are running about $110,000,000 a month. Officials estimate 4,000,000 families—17,000,000 people—were on relief rolls in May.

A rural rehabilitation program of the relief administration is just starting. Hopkins estimated today that close to $100,000,000 would have been spent within the next year. The government expects to get back at least 75 per cent through repayments of loans.

The civil works and emergency works programs which gave employment to more than 4,000,000 at times, are said by relief officials to have resulted in hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of construction and other work of public benefit.

Expenditures for Past Three Months $45,000 Compared With Receipts of $46,194.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(P)—The democratic national committee reported today its treasury deficit on May 31 as $557,757. Its listed expenditures for the past three months at $45,008, with receipts of $46,194.

This was the second democratic political development of the day. Earlier, published reports that Guy T. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue, would succeed Postmaster-General Farley as chairman of the democratic national committee brought an informal denial from the White House.

The committee's financial report, filed with House Clerk South Trimble, showed a cash balance on June 1 of $15,787.

The republican national committee reported yesterday a treasury deficit of $203,000, which since has been covered by pledges at the meeting of the group in Chicago.

Arthur Mullen, former democratic national committeeman from Nebraska, now practicing law in Washington, D. C., loaned the committee $2,500, and Breckenridge Long, of Washington, cancelled a loan of $2,500 he made to the committee.

Some of the larger unpaid obligations listed by the committee included $50,250 to John J. Raskol, of New York, former chairman of the committee; $25,000 to R. W. Morrison, of San Antonio, Texas; J. P. Kennedy, New York, $33,576; M. L. ## Dixie Bright Spot in New Deal Garment Association Is Told

W. D. Anderson, of Macon, Says Progress of Textile Industry, Garment Trade Going Forward.

The south has been the nation's brightest spot in the first year of President Roosevelt's recovery program, W. D. Anderson, of Macon, president of the Bibb Manufacturing Company and president of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, told the members of the Southern Garment Manufacturers' Association at a banquet climaxing their first annual convention at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel Tuesday night.

Asserting that the progress of the textile industry and that of the garment trade is going forward hand in hand, the Macon manufacturer revealed that since the Roosevelt New Deal was launched last year there have been 145,000 persons added to the textile company pay rolls and of these 103,000 have been given employment in southern mills.

During this time we have increased our pay rolls 100 per cent and the hourly wages of our employees have been increased 69 per cent," Mr. Anderson said. "These things have been accomplished despite an increase of 150 per cent in the cost of our materials, including the 821-per-bale processing taxes on our cotton."

Farmer Shares Improvement. Mr. Anderson said that the betterment coming to the employees in the textile industry not only has been shared by those in the garment-making industry but has come to the southern cotton farmer as well. He quoted General Hugh Johnson, national recovery administrator, as saying that the general improvement under the cotton textile code has been the best in the country.

"In wide travels over the nation in the last year I have seen no place or no section which rivals the progress of the south," he declared. Mr. Anderson spoke to an audience of diners which filled the hotel's main ballroom. He was introduced by Robert M. Gamble, toastmaster at the dinner.

Paddock Speaks Today. Today's sessions of the convention will be featured by an address by Colonel R. B. Paddock, of New York, director of the cotton garment code authority. Colonel Paddock, a veteran army officer, is a nephew of General John J. Pershing and a former deputy recovery administrator. Others on this morning's program are John C. Gall, of Washington, associate general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers, who will speak on "An Analysis of New Laws Passed by Congress Affecting Industrial Operations," and R. Smith Payne, former deputy administrator of the recovery program. Mayor James L. Key will address the convention at the luncheon-meeting.

Tuesday's sessions were featured by an address by Governor Eugene Talmadge, who praised members of the association for their part in the recovery program and urged them to "get behind the railroads" in an effort to bring about reduced freight rates. "You can save money, not only by buying from our southern mills but also by getting behind the railroad and forcing them to reduce transportation costs," the governor said. "The high cost of transportation was an important factor in bringing on the depression and in prolonging it."

Evenson Opens Convention. The governor made the address of welcome after R. L. Evenson, president of the organization, opened the convention. The response was made by J. H. Ronck, of New Orleans. The address of the president and reports of the secretary and treasurer also were heard during the opening session, as was the address of J. W. Fite, of Nashville, who spoke on the aims of the association and told what it means to the south. B. Dickie, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, was the Tuesday noon luncheon speaker.

Discussion of problems of the industry was had at Tuesday afternoon session.

The closing session this afternoon will be featured by the election of officers.

GILLIAM SAYS PITTMAN 'MONOPOLIZING' RALLY

Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, one of Governor Eugene Talmadge's two opponents for reelection Tuesday charged that Judge C. C. Pittman, the governor's other opponent, "monopolized" the July 4 program at Warm Springs, to which Mr. Gilliam was invited only to have the invitation withdrawn after he had accepted a place on the program.

Mr. Gilliam retaliated by inviting Judge Pittman to share the program with him Thursday night at the DeKalb county courthouse, when he will make the first public address of his campaign.

It was understood Tuesday that other candidates for statehouse offices who had been invited to speak at Warm Springs July 4, had had the speaking invitations recalled and that they were invited to sit on the platform but not to speak.

"If Judge Pittman wishes to monopolize the rally which I understand, was arranged by the Warm Springs Chamber of Commerce, I have no objection," Alderman Gilliam said. "There is plenty of time for me to speak in Meriwether county, which I intend to do."

"Meanwhile," he added, "I am opening my campaign at the DeKalb county courthouse at 8 o'clock Thursday night and I extend Judge Pittman a cordial invitation to be present and divide the time with me on that occasion."

Judge Pittman announced last Saturday that he had accepted the July 4 date at Warm Springs and Mr. Gilliam followed Monday with a similar announcement. He also had accepted a place on the program, an announcement which he recalled a few hours later. Mr. Gilliam has not made another engagement for July 4.

SOUTHERN ANNOUNCES IMPROVED SERVICE

Southern Railway Company announces the inauguration of summer passenger train service into the mountain resort section of western North Carolina. Sleeping car service was established to Asheville from New Orleans, Richmond and Atlanta and summer trains Nos. 1 and 2 were added between Spartanburg and Asheville on which the New Orleans and Atlanta cars will be handled. Under this new schedule arrangement Atlantians may leave over the Southern at midnight and arrive in Asheville at 8:30 a. m. On the return trip the train leaves Asheville at 9:15 p. m., with arrival in Atlanta at 5:50 a. m. Sleeping cars may be occupied in Atlanta at 9 p. m. and passengers may remain in the cars in Atlanta until 7:30 a. m. On June 29 overnight sleeping car service will be added in connection with trains Nos. 23 and 24 from Savannah to Asheville.

Southern passenger officials further state that the usual all-expense tours of the Smoky Mountains Tour Company will be available from Asheville to and through the Great Smoky Mountains National park and to other points of interest in that region.

Girl Will Address Washington Bankers

Miss Ethel Purcell, Indies' teller at the Fulton National bank, will today in Washington achieve the distinction of being the first Atlanta girl ever to speak on a program of a national convention of the American Institute of Banking.

Miss Purcell will address the women's conference of the convention, which holds its sessions at the New Willard hotel. The subject of her address will be "Public Speaking as the Door to Leadership."

ETHEL PURCELL. The convention, which opened on Monday, will be in session through Thursday, with several thousand in attendance, including the leading bankers from all parts of the country.

Miss Purcell, in her speech, will make special reference to the vastly increased importance attached to public speaking through the invention of the radio, which has widened the possible audience immeasurably.

Awards for Paving Delayed to July 12

W. E. Wilburn, chairman of the state highway board, announced Tuesday that a $750,000 paving, grading and bridge contract letting set for June 28 had been postponed until July 12.

The chairman said that the highway board had been unable to obtain all rights of way for the roads but anticipated that these would be in the board's possession in order not to delay the letting further. None of the projects to be included in the letting have been announced.

PRESBYTERIAN GROUP ENDS MEETING TODAY

Whatever is known about turtles has not made much of an impression as yet on that vast family known as the Testudinidae. Included in this family are turtles that may properly be called terrapins. Boil the family down to its most confusing genus, and we are left with the taxonomic tangle represented by the genus Pseudemys. Just why they should be called "false turtles" is not clear.

I am not even making an estimate of the number of species of this genus that may be found in Georgia. I am satisfied that the major number of our large hard-shelled species may be included in this genus. In my early days I was amazed at the numbers of these huge terrapins in some of the lakes in south Georgia. I recall especially one mill pond that was all of 90 years old. It was full of beautiful bream that took a fly as soon as it hit the water until a game warden took me as soon as I hit the bank. It also held the biggest turtles and terrapin I had seen prior to that time. The first garfish of my experience was a four-foot one that I took in a turtle trap. It wasn't meant to be a turtle trap when I made it, but it worked for that purpose. The idea was to tie up a huge stump and pull it out of the lake to avoid cracking one's crown on it when diving. Upon diving to make sure the lashings were in place I found this gar and two terrapin caught in the ropes. These turtles were named for me then by a native who called them yellow-bellied cooters. That was vaguely satisfying until I found that they were Crysemys scabra. The name disappeared from the literature some years later and I waded through piles of papers until I found the new name, Pseudemys scripta. The shell of the species is covered with rough ridges in each shield. These ridges extend lengthwise of the shield, making the animal appear as if he had had been too much in water. There is nothing striking about the colors, for there is no definite pattern, light brown and yellow over dark brown being the sole claim of beauty of the upper shell. The plastron, or groups throughout the United States and he will interpret the NIRA particularly in reference to the part played by accountancy in the operation of business. Through correspondence he has expressed the belief that all units in every line of business will in the future find it necessary, as a matter of self-preservation, to adopt an efficient and uniform method of arriving at costs and relating those costs to production and distribution.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by telephoning the chamber of Commerce, it was stated Tuesday. The price will be 75 cents per plate.

under shell, which is rigidly affixed to the carapace, is a pure yellow, while the undersurface of the marginal shields is yellow with a spot of black in the outer edge. The head is black, boldly marked with yellow. The average length of a group of adults measured last summer was about 12 inches, but they were unusually large for the species. By the way, you friends in south Georgia, this is a marketable species.

ALL GASOLINES ALIKE? DON'T BELIEVE IT!

Some people believe there is no difference in gasolines. To disprove this idea, once and for all, Gulf made a series of 12 power tests on famous hills, in which 33 different gasolines competed.

WHAT furnishes the toughest test for the power of any gasoline? A hill!

This is why Gulf picked 12 famous American hills as locations for its power tests. On each of these hills, leading brands of gasoline, bought from local service stations, competed to see which could propel a car and heavy load farthest up hill in high gear before the motor stalled.

Here is presented the evidence gathered from these tests—certified by a notary public—evidence which proves, beyond question, that there is a real difference in gasolines.

Baer Must Stop Crayner and McGil Says

YEAR'S LAY-OFF BIG QUESTION ON CHALLENGER

Odds Favor the Champ at 6 to 5 as Examiners Okay Principals.

By Ralph McGill.
NEW YORK CITY, June 12.—After six months of lay-off, the big fight between Baer and Crayner, challenger and champion in the heavyweight fighting ranks, will take place on Thursday night in the big bowl on Long Island and no one knows anything about the fight except that it will be held. And that it is the toughest situation imaginable. It is the toughest situation imaginable. They seem to have taken about $100,000 off the gate by their allyhood about Baer being a hollow shell and all that sort of thing. But no one seems to care. The Garden officials are mad-houses and that is the tip-off on the whole situation.

Just to complicate matters the more a heavy rain started falling about 4 o'clock this afternoon and the ticket sale stopped immediately at the Garden office.

It is sure to pick up again tomorrow, as there is no doubt but that the daffy details have one and all by the ears. There is more than $200,000 in the till already and that is not unimportant.

The fight will be broadcast. It gets started about 9 o'clock, which is 8 o'clock in Atlanta, or was when I left. Crayner should win Thursday night, but the big fellow is scared. There isn't any doubt about that. Baer has his goat and is safely at Assured Jack. Crayner is literally fretting his pounds. His throat is sore. A frontal sinus pains him. He's worried. Baer hasn't taken him seriously, either as a fighter or in a social way.

FLUSTERED.
Crayner may become flustered. And when he is flustered he is like something which has just dropped out of a tree. He loses control, gets a vacant look on his face and begins pawing and clutching.

Today Crayner, here for the second examination of the principals by the boxing commission physicians, appeared nervous, worried and fretful. Baer was as daffy as ever. He wanted to dress in the same room with Crayner, but this was refused.

Crayner was ready days ago. The question between whether he will be state and fit to fight is like something which has just dropped out of a tree. That's one side of it. And the other is Baer, the loogan from California. He really is a good actor, gets away with the radio and sings away with a banknote to be in the company of blondes.

He hasn't trained for a year and then stepped in for six weeks of it. He said today that it was just a breeze. He invited several young ladies to give him a call when he became champion and responded to the cheers of the crowd with an air which seemed to say he merited them. He readily accepted the congratulations of all right. But somehow I can't seem to believe that a fellow can travel the path Baer has and then wipe out all the effects and end in shape with six weeks of training.

MARKED CONTRAST.
His demeanor is in marked contrast to that of Crayner's. Baer can't be taken seriously. He is a complete imagination to fight back verbally, has really lost his temper and his poise.

Yes, sir, the dual of the daffodils is looking up. It is just as complete as a mixed up head and he and everyone seems to be going around in a circle. Jack Dempsey rather fancies Baer. I happened to run into him at the Garden office this afternoon. He was with Bob Smith, the old-time fight manager and trainer, who helped train the late W. L. Stripling, for the Schmeling fight, here in Atlanta. He tried to have Stripling's work-out stopped three days before they were. But that is another story.

Dempsey and his wife are "expecting" the next morning. Crayner is more interested in that than the fight.

The Baer supporters seem to figure on a quick knockout. And that is, I am sure, the only chance the Californian has.

But hitting Crayner isn't easy. He has a really good defense.

I saw Jack Sharkey hit him in the jaw with one of the greatest left hooks in the game, but Crayner didn't move since that time no one has really been able to tag the big Eye-talian on that jaw, which is plenty big as a target.

REAL BOXER.
Crayner is a real boxer. And if Baer doesn't go out and get him early he never will. Because I believe the champion will recuperate quickly.

At any rate, the fight, which was called to say that the odds were 6 to 5 for Crayner with plenty of Baer money flowing in this afternoon. It figures Baer may go in as a favorite or at even money unless the Crayner money experts tomorrow.

The experts are as divided on this fight as is possible. I am sure Crayner is in shape or at least that he is in shape. But they do not know about Baer.

They fear he may be one of those hollow shells. They point out that Jim Jeffries looked like a man who fought Johnson and that Dempsey was the favorite to beat Tunney. But when they entered the fight, they were both weak of leg and lacking in punch and stamina.

The dual of the daffodils. And hanging around will make any of the visitors daffy.

I rather expect to see something happen which never has happened in the ring. What, well I am asking you. Each of these fighters have a death wish on their minds. They want to take Thursday night even that grim possibility not to remote. Crayner and his 260 pounds shows unbelievable power. He has never been able to time it and make his blows punches. If he once does it he will beat any man before him.

His three fights, the beating of Sharkey and the decisions over Leonard and the light-heavyweight Loughran, mean little.

There are plenty of people who believe that the Sharkey fight was one of those things. And Crayner was unable to knock over the aging Uzcudun and the veteran light-heavyweight Loughran. How then can he be figured to take the hard-hitting Baer? Well, again, I am asking you. Your correspondent, after seeing Baer and Crayner and after talking with both briefly, is more in the dark than ever.

After more confusing deliberations I will try to come up with the winner in the Thursday morning papers. But don't go too heavily on it.

The two questions I was asked were who is vice president of the United States and who will win this fight. I don't know either.

A. K. Tigrett Re-elected Southern Tennis Head

Association in Meeting Here Selects Same Officials With One Exception.

By Jack Tracy.
A. K. Tigrett, Memphis, the very popular president of the Southern Lawn Tennis Association, last night was re-elected for a fourth consecutive term at the annual meeting at the Georgian Terrace.

With one exception, the complete list of officers was re-elected. Peyre Kennedy, Spartanburg, was elected first vice president, succeeding Dan Murray, New Orleans.

Officers re-elected included Jack Mooney, Atlanta, second vice president; Reginald Fleet, Atlanta, secretary; and Malon Courts, Atlanta, treasurer.

Tigrett is a very able player as well as an outstanding leader of southern tennis. A member of the Davis cup selection committee in the south, he carried on lengthy correspondence with a number of tennis clubs in the south, and he made a trip to Baltimore, a day to Washington to confer with the committee regarding a place for Bryan Grant, Atlanta's diminutive player of national tennis.

While the committee did not deem it advisable to select Grant this year, Tigrett and the following men will see Bitts on the team. "He needs more experience on grass courts," says Tigrett, "and I intend to see he gets it."

Tigrett is well pleased with the consideration given Grant this year. "The Davis cup committee was very considerate," he said this year. "Grant was treated fairly. And he accepted the decision in a very sportsmanlike manner."

AT CUP LUNCHEON.
Tigrett attended a buffet luncheon given by the Davis cup team just before the Davis cup team sailed from New York.

"The team is confident of making a good showing," R. Norris Williams, the captain, thinks the United States will recapture the cup.

The executive committee of the Southern Lawn Tennis Association named last night includes all the officers and the following men: Ray Jones, Louisville; R. D. Potts, Memphis; Colonel John McClellan, New Orleans; Robert Alexander, Nashville; and William McWane, Birmingham.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE.
The advisory committee comprises Dr. L. E. Morton, Anniston; J. L. Thoms, Shreveport; George Faison, Memphis; Miss Eliza Cox, Asheville; Lupton Patten, Chattanooga; Dr. Richmond McKinney, Memphis; Dan Murray, New Orleans; Stanley Howland, Asheville; and Dr. R. O. Rychem, Memphis.

Regular business was transacted at the meeting adjourned until another year.

CRUSSEL HOPE HEAD KEY CARD
Bill Crusell, leading Atlanta light-heavyweight, will meet Jimmy Hope, Milwaukee, Wis., in the main match Friday night at the Key arena, located at Fair street and Delta place, across from the James L. Key golf course.

Bill has been flooring his opponents since recovering from his shoulder injury, with a display of wrestling that surpasses any period of his career. Hope is a fast wrestler who omits the rough stuff and depends on skill and science to win his matches.

Another favorite at the Key arena, Ted Strickland, is expected to appear in the semi-final. Strickland has been in the hospital, but is now ready to go again. Ted is grateful for the help received from the benefit program and will be returning to the arena in a few days.

Fans will be pleased with the billing of Young London for the opener by Matchmaker Jason Thompson. He meets Whitey Patterson, the Panther from Panthersville. An injured leg kept Whitey from appearing the last time they were scheduled, but he has posted bond for his appearance Friday night and will be there.

Challenger To Make Supreme Effort for Title at Ponce de Leon.

When Pete Sauer climbs into the ring for his big career, the world's championship heavyweight wrestling title tonight at Ponce de Leon he will be in the best condition of his career.

London, the world's champion, has been training for this chance for a long time and preparing at the same time to make the most of his opportunity to gain the crown for many years. He has left nothing to be desired in training for the battle which will draw the largest crowd of the wrestling season provided the weather conditions prove suitable.

During his long reign as champion Jimmy London has never met a man determined to beat him in Pete Sauer tonight. Pete the Sauer is set for blood and a world's title. He will take the fight to These Jeems and sink or swim, pass out or survive, he will stake his life on the mat at Old Ponce tonight.

There will be times when the match will get rough. The referee can look forward to a busy evening—that is, if both grapplers survive long enough to make it an evening. And Atlanta's mat colony should be treated to one of the most interesting heavyweight matches ever staged here.

Jimmy London realizes that he has a real match on his hands and champion that he is he will not take any chances of having his crown toppled by any careless act of unpreparedness. He will enter the ring in perfect condition and in typical London style seek to finish the challenger early with the best of his repertoire of mat tricks even though they are punishing and brutal to those gathered at the ringside.

Advance requests for tickets for the world's championship match indicate that all records for wrestling attendance here will be broken. Requests for tickets ranging all the way from single seats to a block of 200 have been received by Matchmaker Henry Weber.

INTEREST HIGH.
Never before since Henry Weber opened his first show here has there been so much interest in a wrestling match as the London-Sauer match has created. Fans from throughout the state have wired and written for reservations and belated buyers are urged to make their purchases at the downtown ticket office, namely the Piedmont Hatters.

The championship match will be a real one. Both men are equally as entertaining as for wrestling as the most ardent fan could wish. Karl Davis will meet the rough-and-tumble Sol Slage and Ivan Vetrovoff will meet the card in a 30-minute match.

Both Slage and Vetrovoff are well known here and at any time they will meet in a one-hour match.

Broken Arm 'Break' For Leo 'Lefty' Moon

Smokie Star Says Accident of Last Year Made Him More Effective.

By Jimmy Jones.
One of those queer quirks of baseball destiny has brought about a miracle in the mellow left arm of "Lefty" Leo Moon, the star pitcher of the Knoxville Smokies. And, we might add, it is one of the best stories in the league this season.

It has to do with a complete fracture of his pitching arm in a hotel scuffle last year made of Moon, a veteran of 11 years on the mound, a more effective pitcher than he ever was before.

Moon himself revealed this fact in explaining how he has managed to come back and win seven games for Knoxville, a fifth-place ball club this year, after his accident of last year which put him out for an entire season.

Manager Lee Head, who catches the ace southpaw and Secretary Ed Allen, of the Smokies, corroborated his statement.

In order to get the full gist of the story it is necessary to go back to a night in New Orleans last April. Moon, starting his second season with the Pelicans, was just pitched and won his first game, 3-2.

JACK TORRANCE IS VOTED BEST ALL-ROUND STAR

Graham Batchelor, Gump Ariail Also Honored by Sports Scribes.

By Dillon Graham.
Jack Torrance, of Louisiana State University, probably was the best all-around athlete produced in the Southeastern conference during the season just closed.

The six-foot, four-inch, 275-pound giant was named first in a poll of sports writers, conducted by the Associated Press.

Torrance was a tackle in football. Not best in the south but right up among the top-notchers. Jack's trouble was that he could not get and could not escape the fear of hurting someone. If he had had his temper aroused, the carnage probably would have been terrific and doubtless he would have been ranked the best tackle in the country.

STRONG CLUB.
In basketball Jack was center on the strong L. U. club. Despite his bulk and weight he was fast on the court and a good shot.

However, his chief bid for national fame came in his work with the track team. He threw the 16-pound shot 55 feet 1 1/2 inches in the Drake relay and he had the generally recognized record by two feet. Jack's throw likely will be accepted as the best at the next meeting of the official body. He also won the discus throw at the Southeastern conference meet.

Torrance will represent Louisiana State in the national college track championship at Los Angeles, June 22-23.

Whitley, of Alabama; Graham Batchelor, of Georgia; and Gump Ariail, of Auburn, were three other stars who drew large votes.

Whitley, although only a sophomore, won three varsity letters. He was a tackle in football and in addition to his work in the line was valuable to the Crimson's championship team as a kicker of points after touchdowns.

ANNUAL TOURNEY.
In basketball he was honored with selection as center on the all-star Southeastern team in the annual title tourney in Atlanta.

In baseball he was a heavy-hitting first baseman and his playing helped Alabama to win the Southeastern crown.

Batchelor was a star in football and track. He was an all-Southeastern end on the gridiron and virtually a one-man track team. Batchelor won first places in the discus, shot, broad jump and javelin throw in many of the dual meets and was tied for high jump in the Southeastern conference title meet.

Ariail also was an all-Southeastern football end. He played center on the basketball team and was an outfielder on the baseball club.

the happenings in the first game. It was quite a battle all the way through and featured by a pair of spectacular catches by Prince Oona, of the Crackers, and Wally French, of the Smokies.

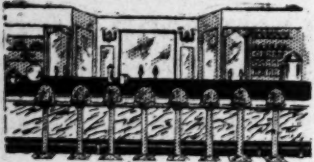

The Cracker center fielder, whose hitting isn't quite up to expectations, brought the crowd to its collective feet by racing in back of second to nab Pete Susko's Texas leaguer with one hand in the fourth and in the same inning French plucked Harry Taw, for a second time in the Southeastern conference title meet.

Toronto Junior League Conference Described by Mrs. Henry Grady Jr.

Editor's Note: Mrs. Henry W. Grady Jr. who conducted the Junior League Jr. column in The Constitution for several years, has been called to the city of Toronto, Canada, to attend the annual conference of the Association of Junior Leagues of America, which is being held in Toronto, Canada. Mrs. Grady accompanied Mrs. Claude McGinnis, Jr., as a delegate, and will be the president of the Atlanta Junior League, which is being organized in Atlanta, Georgia, during the summer months. The article appearing in The Constitution today, is written in the first person, and is relative to the Toronto conference.

By Mrs. HENRY W. GRADY JR.

When I was elected to attend the fourth annual conference of the Association of Junior Leagues of America in Toronto, Canada, I was very proud but I'll have to admit that, at that time, I didn't have the slightest idea what it meant to be a delegate and only thought of the trip as a grand lark. Mrs. Claude McGinnis, Jr., the new president of the Atlanta Junior League, and I left for Toronto on Saturday, May 26, and arrived in the lobby of the Hotel Royal York early Monday morning, and found a scene which appeared to be in wildest confusion. Three hundred delegates from the United States, Canada and Mexico were pouring in from the trains, but the Toronto girls had the situation well in hand, and soon had us all registered, programs and identification tags distributed, and each delegate and her baggage on the way home with her official hostess.

Delegates from Region 5.

From that moment we were not allowed to draw breath, so closely did meeting follow meeting, and dinner followed luncheon. Our hostess, Mrs. Winifred Cameron, turned out to be a dear, but she was a hard taskmaster waking us early and hurrying us to each meeting time. On Monday we met for luncheon and on Tuesday meeting with the delegates from Region Five, that is Georgia, North and South Carolina and Florida, and it was nice to break the ice with girls who spoke the same inflection of the English language. The welfare meeting on Tuesday was featured by an address from Hon. David C. Adie, commissioner of social welfare, New York state, which stirred the imagination of every one present. Following luncheon, the Junior League magazine forum took place, later breaking up into smaller groups to discuss publicity, news sheets and Scribblers' Clubs. During the magazine meeting the spotlight was on Atlanta when it was announced that Mrs. Preston Stevens, the Atlanta editor, had been chosen as the best from any league.

The program for Wednesday included an organization meeting in the morning and a children's theater meeting in the afternoon, and it was at a regional luncheon that day that Mrs. McGinnis was honored when she was made chairman of the nominating committee which selects the next regional director. Thursday an open forum discussion and debate and an address by Mrs. McGinnis, Jr., who is now director of Brooklyn museum, gave a charming talk on "Museums in the Modern World," at the arts and interests meeting, and later in a smaller group the Atlanta Junior League was called on to tell of our children's radio hour in connection with Carnegie library, and also of our work with the CWA orchestra last winter. On Friday morning a delegates' meeting concluded the program at which time Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, of Little Rock, Ark., was elected president of the association, and San Francisco chosen for next year's conference. After adjournment we barely had time to get lunch and take a boat across Lake Ontario to Niagara Falls, thence to New York and home.

It must not be forgotten that while we were attending these strenuous sessions, the Atlanta Junior League was entertained socially. On Monday the Hotel Royal York was the scene of the opening banquet and the delegates, in their most formal attire, were welcomed by the wife of the Lieutenant General of Ontario, Mrs. Herbert D. Bruce, and several other dignitaries. When the receiving line broke up, the delegates were taken to their places by two bagpipers of the Royal Highlanders regiment and upon a signal, "God Save the King," was played and the delegates, who were drunk, Mrs. McGinnis and I again heard the bag-pipers played on Tuesday evening when the young bride of our Scotch hostess returned home and, in the most unselfish way I have ever seen, paraded the garden, blowing out the weird strains of "Loch Lomond."

Edon's department store was the scene of the dinner Wednesday evening, and this was followed by a vaudeville show in Edon's auditorium (in part of the store) put on by the members of the conference committee of the Toronto League. This was enjoyable as was the regional dinner in a beautiful private home Thursday night.

The thing that impressed me most about the conference was the tremendous amount of effort on the part of the Toronto League to make everything run smoothly, which it apparently did without a ripple of confusion. Boats and buses were waiting at the appointed moment, and luncheons and dinners served with lightning rapidity. The most interesting part of the conference was the smaller group meetings where the leagues were divided according to their size. Here mutual problems were discussed and helpful suggestions given and it was always with a sigh of regret that these gatherings were found to be over so soon.

If Atlanta ever has another association conference we will have to bestir ourselves considerably to measure up to the mark set by other leagues in the past few years. The charm of this convention lies in the fact that each delegate is billeted in a private home, but Atlanta has beautiful homes and, in addition, the most wonderful food in the world. If we can add to this number of willing league workers who will carry out all the details necessary, we can expect in a few years to offer Atlanta's hospitality to a conference of the Association of Junior Leagues of America.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

(Posed by Diana Wynard).

Perfumes To Revive Fragrant Memories for Mothers

By MIGNON.

If you want a helpful suggestion for a gift for your mother remember that the favorite perfume of women who have lived 60 years is, almost invariably—violet. There is a softness, a delicacy, a quiet fragrance about violets that makes a tremendous appeal to older women who have quieted down a bit. So many women never quiet down any more, but thank heaven for the choice few, who have gay spirits but have stopped rushing about like mad trying to recapture the days when they were debutantes or had their hair in pig-tails. The great gift is to keep step with your years and meet them gracefully and at least half way.

1. Violet perfumes that are rare and fine, something delicate enough to charm gentlemen, are not so plentiful, but there are some very fine ones I will be happy to suggest if you are interested.

2. For the Younger Mothers. Perfume for mothers can be anything fine, as long as it is really good and indicative of fragrant memories. That being the idea of sending scents to her, I can suggest a fine one on which I have never had one complaint, and I have had so many hundreds of inquiries about it. It comes in bottles of various size so that you can suit the gift to the size of your purse.

3. Another perfume that has a glamour both of scent and particularly in the bottle, is made by a famous Parisian dressmaker and the bottle is made up of sections of mirrors.

4. For a very young mother, nothing could be nicer than a perfume with a name like Sunday afternoon vesper service. It is, in reality, the scent that reminds you of soft light through church windows. That I suppose, is why they chose for the name of a beautiful religious song.

5. If you're sending your mother the violet perfume, it's a nice idea if you can afford it, to send the face powder of the same violet scent. If you're feeling especially flush, you can make up a bottle of toilet water, also violet, made by the same company.

They all have lavender labels with little purple violets on them, a perfect accompaniment for past-middle-age.

A Shelf On a Building Becomes a Buffet Table

By FLORENCE LA GANKE.

The Page family were all agog over an idea that was becoming popular. It was the suggestion that picnics could be held in one's own back yard. It was not necessary to go miles and miles to a beach or a picnic grounds. "Eat at home in your own back yard" was the new slogan.

Tables and chairs, particularly tables, out of doors is not a woman's job. Yet most families want to picnic just as soon as dad returns from work. Then too even the best of back yards are rather lumpy and tables are not set firm or true on hummocks.

Most people, especially grown ups, are not anxious to sit down on the grass. That's all right for an occasional out-of-door meal but not for a steady diet. And so Nancy, as well as friends of hers, were interested in the idea of having a permanent shelf in the yard.

side of the garage. He ordered a set of board 30 inches long and 30 inches deep. He had the board attached to the side of the garage with hinges.

On the side of the building he attached a strong rope with hammock gear. A hook was at the lower end of it.

The rope which was knotted into the board was wound securely when the book caught it. This kept the rope from slipping on the hook.

The under side of the board had a small hook attached to which the loop of rope was attached when the table was down and not in use. This kept the loop from trailing in the ground.

The food was set on the shelf table and the table was drawn up and everybody was happy. Or for large parties the shelf table was used as a buffet. Then people gathered in chairs on the lawn or terrace.

Dr., Mrs. Fuller Given Bon Voyage Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Barnett were hosts of a bon voyage dinner party at their home on Ponce de Leon avenue on Saturday evening in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Ellis A. Fuller, who leave at an early date for a tour of Europe and the near east before attending the Baptist World's Alliance in Berlin. They sail next Sunday from New York city on the Europa, and will visit the Holy Land before attending the alliance in August.

The table was arranged significantly of the occasion, having for its centerpiece a hand-made crystalline ship at full sail, bearing the flag "Europa," and containing various shades of garden flowers with pink and yellow predominating. At either end of the centerpiece was an ice cream ship floating among icebergs. Yellow tapers, tied with butterfly bows of pink tulle, surrounded the centerpiece, casting a soft glow over the table. Favours featured tiny metal ships equipped with life savers, and the decorative theme was carried out with ice cream moulded in the shape of an ocean liner. Guests were Dr. and Mrs. Fuller, Judge and Mrs. E. D. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Price, and Mrs. F. L. Spelden, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Anderson.

COX VISITS ROOSEVELT AND DENIES CANDIDACY

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—James M. Cox, former governor of Ohio and 1920 democratic presidential nominee, called today at the White House for a luncheon conference with President Roosevelt.

Asked by newspapermen as he entered the executive office if he would consider running for the senate this year, Cox replied: "No, sir, that is final."

SMART NEW VERSION OF POPULAR SHIRTWAIST DRESS.

This jaunty model can be carried out in cottons, linens, tub silks or lightweight woolsens.

A pique in white with brown novelty striping is very effective, and incidentally very chic. Make the gimpes of white or of brown crisp organdie. Another interesting scheme is nautical blue linen with white linen gimpes.

In hoseblack check in gabardine, it's a very sporty and ultra-new. Shirting cottons and seersuckers are also sportive.

West, dealer. North and South vulnerable.

The defensive play was interesting. South was Mr. Lester J. Baran, and North Dr. Richard Ecker. Mr. Baran had no cards of his partner's suit so chose as his lead the diamond jack. The seven was played from dummy, and the eight was then led, covered by Mr. Baran continued with the ten, and the declarer again ducked in dummy, playing the nine. Dr. Ecker won with the queen. Instead of laying down the ace of diamonds Dr. Ecker now led the club 3 to weakness in the dummy. This was won by the jack in the South hand, and the last diamond returned and won by North. The club queen was then led, covered by the king, and won with the ace. South now returned a club, which North ruffed, returning the spade queen. East won with the ace, and the heart queen was then led, covered by North returned his last trump, the jack, and East won and led another heart. South ruffed, picked up East's two remaining trumps, and won the remaining trick. In other words, East carried only two tricks—the ace and king of trumps. Obviously, looking at all the cards, if East and West had to play the hand, they would do much better to lead the heart ace and endure the strained relations that their rejection creates.

It is infinitely pathetic to see a woman disappointed in the children she has borne and reared and loved and loved. Yet if her love is unselfish, the thing she most desires is the happiness of those children, and although they don't arrive at it by the path she would mark she should be content that they have arrived.

Miss Lida Mell and Mr. Perkins Wed at North Avenue Church

The marriage of Miss Lida Mell and Mr. Robert Holbrook Perkins was solemnized Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the North Avenue Presbyterian church by the Rev. Richard Orme Flinn, the occasion being marked by impressive dignity and exquisite beauty. During the assembly of the guests a program of nuptial music was rendered by Miss Ethel Beyer, organist. The bride's brother, Robert Emerson Mell, sang "Untill" and "Because" just before the service, accompanied by Miss Beyer.

Church Decorations

The interior of North Avenue church, with its beautiful stained glass windows and floral decorations, presented a lovely setting for the afternoon ceremony. Palms and foliage plants were banded against the back of the pulpit in pyramid effect. Graceful white wicker floor baskets, filled with long-stemmed white flowers, including gladioli, roses and lilies, were arranged amongst the foliage. Adorning the choir rail above the foliage plants were three seven-branched candelabra cantharus, each burned with white tapers. An alabaster urn filled with Madonna lilies graced the altar, and clusters of the lilies and white gladioli adorned the pews reserved for the families of the bride and groom.

CHEERFUL NOTES.
Some of the more important cheerful notes before the market for tomorrow included:

Indications the Wagner bill may be shelved for this session and emergency legislation rushed through to prevent serious labor difficulties.

Steady improvement in certain classifications of retail trade.

STRIKE UNSETTLED.

These brighter items, however, were not sufficient to encourage an spectacular re-entry into the market. The strike is not settled. Hopes for a respite from some government quartering are not re-echoed in some steel circles.

Those who feel a sharp break may be in the making pointed to several factors they claimed were unfavorable. Among these were:

Dow-Jones industrial average came close to the 100 mark today with chances of a severe test on the downside due.

German economic situation—worsening.

Two-Year-Old Lives

After Rattler's Bite

STUART, Va., June 12.—(AP)—

Christine Martin, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Martin, was recovering today from a bite of a four-foot rattlesnake which struck her as she slept in bed with her parents early Sunday morning.

The child was declared out of danger Monday night.

How the snake got into the bed, and why the parents did not learn of its presence was not known.

Mr. Martin was awakened by the child's whimpering about 5 o'clock Sunday morning. He found that she had shifted her position in the bed, and when he started to move her he noted that her right foot was bleeding and her leg was dis-colored. Springing out he saw the rattler gliding across the bedroom floor. It disappeared through a hole in the map board.
